Trouble—Spanish, Mexican Which Bank Biggest Uncle Sam Raises Germs Lady Heath Joins Us

—By Arthur Brisbane—

PRIMO DE RIVERA and his King. Alfonso of Spain, have a rebellion on their hands. There is always rebellion in Catalonia, always singing, "Weep, weep, Catalonia." But this latest rebellion is said to have spread over Spain, affecting the army.

Alfonso breaks all speed laws, plays a hard game of polo, enjoys bull fights, always smiles and is popular. Not everybody can do what Mussolini and Kemal Pasha can do.

Trouble continues in Mexico. "Rebels" dynamite a passenger and freight train. Three bombs demolished the engine and an armored car filled with soldiers was overturned.

Doukhobors think Providence doesn't want them to wear clothes, even in zero weather, calling themselves "sons of freedom," and refuse to dress their children for school.

All religious ideas should be respected, but sometimes they put man off the track.

Which is to be the country's biggest bank? The National City of New York leads now.

The American Exchange Bank-Irving Trust Company, headed by President Harry E. Ward, recently moved up to fourth place.

Now there is talk of creating a two-billion-dollar bank by merging the Guaranty Trust Company and the Bank of Commerce.

Between them these two banks would have more than two thousand million dollars.

What Charles E. Mitchell, head of the country's biggest bank, would do if the first place were taken from him remains to be seen. He probably would do "SOMETHING."

The $1,000,000 Stock Exchange seat will come in due time, also the $1,000,000,000 investment trust and the $5,000,000,000 bank. What would Andrew Jackson think of that? "By the eternal."

The Rockefeller Institute has been busy with those germs for some years.

The difficulty is to isolate the individual germ that causes influenza. Scientists only know that it is a germ small enough to pass through a porcelain filter.

Influenza germs don't like fresh air or the juice of oranges. So have plenty of both.

This country, fortunate in many things, reports a considerable drop in the number of influenza cases.

The disease is spreading in Great Britain. In Glasgow the unemployed have been put to work helping grave diggers. Six hundred and fifty-four died in one week.

Lady Heath, wife of Sir James Heath, a brilliant female flier, turns American, takes the oath of loyalty to Uncle Sam, and says she doesn't care what her husband thinks.

She wishes you to know that she has eaten her first "hot dog." Likes America, and doesn't care whether you call her "Lady" or "Mrs." as long as you are friendly. This lady, under any name, will make her way.

Governor Smith shook hands with President-elect Hoover at Miami yesterday. Departing, he wished Mr. Hoover "all good luck," adding, "and I mean it." He might have said what Socrates said to his judges.

To have responsibility for this country's government on your hands during the next four or eight years is not necessarily "a pleasure."

The first airplane time table, published by the American Air Transport Association, is a 12-page folder, giving information about flying time in 80 American cities.

Commercial air ships fly, "weather permitting." Once railroad time tables carried the words "trains will leave, weather permitting." Now all trains and the air mail laugh at the weather.

Soon passenger planes will defy storms, as do express trains and steamships.

Mr. Whalen, New York police commissioner, wants big, high-powered cars for his policemen. Criminals have big cars and policemen should be as well equipped, says he.

To impress criminals big cars may be needed. But to catch them the small car is the thing.

A good small car, doing 60 miles an hour or better, fast enough for a crowded city, will overhaul any big car, unable to dodge in and out of traffic.

Sport Bill Signed by Nichols

Ending a battle that began even before the new year, Mayor Nichols today signed the City Council order ratifying the professional Sunday sports bill and granting licenses to the Boston Braves and Boston Red Sox.

There remains but one formality.

SLAIN BRIDE BURIED IN LOWELL CEMETERY AT SECRET FUNERAL

By BERT FORD

Cora Jacques Cullen, murdered bride of five days, was secretly buried today by her family in Lowell, as a selectmen of Hingham, where she was slain, took steps toward offering $500 reward for capture of the slayer.

State police today planned an intensive search of unfrequented country districts within a short radius of Boston to supplement the widespread hunt already launched in the Vermont-Canadian border region for Christopher Cullen, the bridegroom, who is charged with the crime.

From an undertaker's the murder victim was taken direct to St. Patrick's Cemetery in Lowell and laid in a grave after her kin had announced the funeral for tomorrow or later.

MOVE AFOOT TO STRIP SONNENBERG OF TITLE

Ever since the Dartmouth Dynamiter butted Strangler Lewis, former tit-bidder, out of the championship here, Lewis and Sandow have been trying to prove the illegitimacy of the "flying tackle."

Sonnenberg has agreed to a display of his mat tactics before the Illinois commission as part of a heavyweight wrestling bill which Promoter Doc Krone has arranged. Lewis and Sandow will be present.

FIVE INJURED AS AUTO AND TANK CAR CRASH

Webster, Jan. 30 (AP)—Five men were injured, one seriously, when a gasoline car on the New Haven railroad struck an automobile on a grade crossing today at Lane's house on the Webster-Southbridge railroad line.

Hector Solan, 35, of Church st., was taken to Webster hospital suffering with a fractured skull. He is unconscious and was reported as being in a critical condition.

Others injured are: George Roy, Valley st., multiple cuts and bruises to the head and shoulders; George Daigle, 37, Mechanic st., cuts on the face and bruises on the shoulders; Leon Johnson, 35, of Oxford, minor cuts, and Earl Lafountain, 23, of Elmsbury, N. Y., cuts on the head and his right knee wrenched.

The automobile was operated by Mrs. Edith R. Cortties of North Grosvenordale, Ct., a teacher at Bartlett High School here. She was not injured.

SHARKEY LEAVES FOR TRAINING AT MIAMI

By JACK CONWAY

The sign posts point toward Miami, Fla., today for Jack Sharkey, rated as the world's leading heavyweight in a national poll of sports writers.

The Boston contender leaves for Miami early this evening on a special car which will be attached to the Federal Express. The car will be shifted tomorrow morning at Washington to one of the Southern railroads. The Sharkey car will arrive at Miami early Friday evening.

This is in compliance with Sharkey's contract with the Madison Square Garden Corporation, which calls for Jack to be on the scene of his contest with Stribling on February 1.

'SLASHER' CUTS COAT OF NEW SUBWAY VICTIM

The "subway slasher" made his fourth sortie today and cut the fur coat of Mrs. Helen Brown of Bay State ave., Somerville, she reported at police headquarters.

According to Mrs. Brown, the coat was cut between the shoulders while she rode on a southbound train between Sullivan sq. and Winter st.

She failed to discover the cut until she walked out of the subway into the cold air.

Since the first report of a slashing of girls' clothing was made two weeks ago, a "subway squad" has been riding the trains, resulting in arrest of an alleged "bugger," but no discovery of a slasher.

He is believed to be using a safety razor blade.

Tidal Wave of Drugs Flooding Nation

Elenore Meherin, famous writer of serials for the Hearst newspapers, author of "Chickie," "Ann," "Nora Lee" and other stories, has turned her attention to the problem of "dope" in this country and has written three profound articles on the subject—of which the following is the first.

In these articles she warns the people of this country against an evil beside which the problems of prohibition enforcement are small indeed. She traces the "bindle" and the "snow" up from the poor crazed addict in the street to the big dealers and out of THIS country, and places the guilt square on the great countries of Europe that profit by the misery of 1,000,000 American men, women and children.

The great ability of Miss Meherin, to please and to interest her millions of readers, is here placed at the service of suffering humanity, and the "dope" problem is illuminated as never before.

By ELENORE MEHERIN

One million victims, drawn chiefly from the nation's youth; sucked to a living death—

And nothing—or so little that it amounts to nothing—done to save them—

This is the "dope" situation as it exists in the United States at the beginning of 1929. And this is the situation as

ELECTION OF JUDGES IS FAVORED AT HEARING

Arguments for and against popular election of judges were today delivered at a hearing before the legislative committee on constitutional law at the State House.

Among a large delegation asking for the change, with the judges serving five-year terms, were Martin Joyce of the Massachusetts branch of the American Federation of Labor and Harry P. Graves of the Boston Central Labor Union.

Edward M. Shanley, a Boston lawyer, in favor of the bill, declared the people are as competent to elect the judiciary as they are to elect the Governor and members of the Legislature.

"A man elected judge for life becomes mentally lazy and arrogant," he added.

LOVE TRIANGLE NEW LEAD IN FIVE-DAY BRIDE SLAYING

A solemn requiem mass will be held later at St. Rita's, her parish church, where only a week ago last Sunday she was wed to Christopher Cullen.

Offer of a reward, it was indicated, will be made after a meeting of the Hingham board of selectmen tonight. Chairman William L. Foster called the special meeting to discuss the matter and said he would also confer with Police Chief Harold Mac Farlane regarding it.

The reward is needed, in Foster's opinion, to stimulate the search for Cullen in Vermont, where, according to one theory held by investigators, he has fled.

Scenting a scheme to throw pursuers off the trail, and believing the missing husband may have had a "hideout" ready and parked his car in a garage near the Boston & Maine Railroad terminal as a blind, state authorities leading the investigation decided on the search of out-of-town localities around Boston.

This plan was revealed after state police heads admitted they would not "spare" a man to join in the hunt in Vermont where the search was said to be centered. All suspects except one taken in the Green Mountain state were eliminated today, the lone one being in a lumber camp and as yet uninterviewed by police.

A "love triangle," as providing the principal motive for the murder of Cora Jacques Cullen at Hingham last Friday, assumed major importance in the investigation today.

This motive, with a secondary motive of robbery to get possession of money belonging to the bride, is believed by police to be indicated by discovery of the existence of a Braintree woman in whom, they said, Cullen was interested.

Search for this woman is under way.

Cullen Posed at Fair as Wild Man From Borneo

Meanwhile, an important feature developed in the case through an exclusive interview secured by a Boston Evening American reporter, with a woman, a friend of Cullen and acquaintance of the bride. This woman furnished interesting information, especially in her account, given for the first time of a quarrel between Cullen and the then Cora Jacques; of its cause, and of its outcome. Cullen's conviction that Cullen did not love the girl who became his wife.

This last statement was taken as bearing in a vital way on the new theory set forth by the police today. This new theory, briefly, includes the "other woman"—the Braintree woman—angle, but is further based upon belief that Cullen "married to get his bride's money."

The woman who gave a most interesting narrative of Cullen, and of his relationship with Cora Jacques, was Mrs. Alida Davis of Queen Anne's Corner, Hingham, a friend of Cullen's kin.

Mrs. Davis said she felt sure the war veteran, hunted today as the slayer and search for whom has resulted thus far in the finding of three men as suspects, did not love his bride.

She said the couple had quarrelled because Cullen accused the girl then his fiancee, of lying to him about her age.

The Hingham woman said Cullen had visited the Queen Anne's Corner household frequently up to some time last December. She added that she attended the "showing" given the murder victim the evening before her wedding to Cullen.

"It was I who gave her the kewpie doll that proved to be the clue leading to the identification of the body," said Mrs. Davis.

"I don't think Chris should have married her," said Mrs. Davis, for he seemed to have only a feeling of friendship for Cora, but she was wild about him."

A checkup is being made by Montreal police of addresses furnished them of places known to have been visited by Cullen, on his four or five trips during the past three years, on vacations or week-ends.

Because of the secrecy attending funeral arrangements—which was decided on to avoid a crowd—the removal of the body of Mrs. Cullen from the undertaker's on Lawrence st., Lowell, was witnessed by only two outsiders, a policeman and a storekeeper.

There were four vehicles in the cortege, the hearse, a car carrying four pallbearers and two cars with members of the Jacques family.

Rev. Joseph A. Cartin, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, read the committal service at the grave. There were no services at the undertaker's. Only a woman with a baby, who was a chance passer-by, and a reporter were witnesses of the interment.

The reason for not taking the body to church, it was explained, was the same as that which caused secrecy regarding funeral plans—to avoid a crowd.

MRS. RUTH'S FAMILY WON'T FIGHT WILL

SHE MAY GET $50,000

DEATH HAS PARTED THEM

With Mrs. Helen Ruth's will leaving the bulk of her estate to little Dorothy, both shown here, the adopted daughter may get the $50,000 specified for her in the will as a result of a suit now pending for $31,000 against an unknown New Yorker.

GLAD BULK OF $50,000 GOES TO DOROTHY

The Woodford family of South Boston, kin of the late Mrs. "Babe" Ruth, declared today, through counsel, that they are "mighty glad" to know that Dorothy Helen Helen Ruth, child ward of the baseball player and his wife, was "taken care of" by Mrs. Ruth's will.

The Woodfords positively announced that they will not contest the testament which cuts them off with $5 each and leaves to the child the bulk of an estate estimated at $50,000.

Dispatches today from New York indicated that little Dorothy's heritage may be increased by a substantial portion of the sum of $31,000, sought as damages by Mrs Ruth in a court suit against an unnamed resident of New York city.

The litigation is to be pressed by James J. Collins, New York executor of the estate of Mrs. Ruth.

Atty. Coslin declared today that Mrs. Ruth had more than $20,000 in a Washington Heights bank in New York. She also had personal property, mostly in jewels, amounting to $32,000.

Dr. Edward Kinder, in whose Watertown home Mrs. Ruth was burned to death, was not mentioned in the will.

Atty. Judson Hannigan, counsel for the Woodford family, said today that Mrs. Ruth's will was made in July, 1927, two months after she and Dr. Kinder had together purchased the Watertown house which they later occupied.

MAPLE LEAF, IN TOW, MAKING SLOW TIME

Aboard U. S. Coast Guard Cutter Tampa, Ja. 30 (AP)—Buffeted by a heavy sea and a westerly gale, the coast cutters Tampa and Mojave were making slow progress toward Bermuda today with the disabled British steamer Silver Maple in tow.

The tow line which the Tampa shot aboard the freighter last night after several attempts had failed held fast, but the Mojave was unable to get a line aboard until daylight, when a hawser was thrown on the stern of the Silver Maple to serve as a rudder.

Except for the loss of her rudder, the Silver Maple was apparently undamaged, although owing to the rough sea officers of the salvage craft had been unable to board her to inspect her condition.

The Silver Maple was keeping her motors running today, and with tow lines aboard her from both coast guard cutters, it was expected that faster time would be made toward Bermuda, still more than 490 miles way. During the night the vessels proceeded only about 24 miles toward their destination.

The Silver Maple first sent out a distress call on Saturday, and the two coast guard cutters reached her yesterday after an 800-mile race.

WOULD LET TEN JURORS DECIDE ON VERDICTS

Declaring that in large cities "the cards are stacked against society in the battle which it wages against the vicious elements," Rep. Roland D. Sawyer of Ware today pleaded for an amendment in the law to permit 10 of 12 jurors to render verdicts, except for murder in the first degree.

Speaking before the committee on constitutional law, Sawyer said one of the major reasons for crime is the feeling on the part of the criminals that they can escape by obtaining the right kind of lawyers.

"The planting of one or two men on the jury who are friendly to the defendant or his attorney often hangs up a jury and a money consideration also can play a part," he said. "Verdicts by 10 men would cut out the planting of jurors."

Opposition was expressed by Rep. John S. Derham of Uxbridge and Clarence W. Rowley of Brookline.

WOMAN PLEADS NOT GUILTY IN SLAYING

Without the company of her three year-old son, Charles, who spent the night with her in a cell, Mrs. Jironomo Bellonio of Pleasant st., Needham, pleaded not guilty to a murder charge today in Dedham court.

She is accused of slaying Peter Terranina, 46, of Pleasant st., Dedham, who was shot to death in the hallway of the Bellonio home.

Following her arrest she was placed in a cell in the Needham police station, but at her request her young son was brought to her and placed in the cell also.

RUNS WITH BABY OVER ROOF

With her two-year-old granddaughter in her arms, Mrs. Bridget Keely of C st., South Boston, led her family to safety across a third story roof top today as fire in the lower part of the building cut off exit by the stairway.

The blaze started in the ground floor variety store of Yuda Cerniber, apparently from the explosion of an oil heater. Damage to the building amounted to $1800.

Mrs. Keely, occupant of a third story tenement, attempting to flee downstairs to the street, found her way blocked by flames. Followed by her family, she climbed through a back door to the roof, across which she gained access to the house next door.

3 PROVIDENCE FIRES ROUT 25 FAMILIES

3 CHILDREN AND MOTHER ARE RESCUED

Providence, Jan. 30—Twenty-five families were driven into wind-swept streets and a mother and her three children were rescued today when three fires, all within two hours, menaced residential sections and caused total loss estimated at more than $35,000.

High winds and low temperature hampered firemen fighting the fires and caused hardship on families forced to leave their homes before they had the chance to put on warm clothing.

The first fire swept through a three-story six family apartment house at 23 Verndale st., near Roger Williams Park. Irving Gorlnick, living in an apartment on the first floor, discovered the fire and aroused others in the house.

Among those driven to the street were Asst. U. S. Dist. Atty. Joseph Fitzpatrick, Mrs. James D. Reilly and son, Mrs. John Smith and daughter, George McClellan and Gorlnick, his wife and child. Damage to the apartment was estimated at more than $25,000.

CHILDREN ARE RESCUED.

Mrs. Victoria Ascoli and her three children, Margaret, three months; Martin, eight, and Raffaelena, 12, all partially overcome by smoke, were rescued by Patrolman H. F. Dargeth from a tenement at 7 Borden st. The officer made two trips into the burning house to rescue the trapped mother and her children.

Nearby homes were threatened during a third fire which caused a loss of more than $2,500 to an unoccupied six-family apartment house at 622 Union ave.

Fearing the fire would spread, police and firemen ordered many families to leave their homes.

Ban of Cardinal On Secret Societies

Madrid, Jan. 30 (AP)—Doctor Segura, Cardinal Primate of Spain, in a pastoral letter today forbade Catholics to affiliate in any way with secret organizations, condemning rotary clubs, women's clubs, benevolent societies and any other organization of similar nature. The letter said:

"Under a commercial, recreative, educational, philanthropic, international or neutral guise, but always laic (unreligious), while they preach morality without religion, these societies conceal a moral denial of the true religion which they try to displace with a moral system or with a religion, neither of which was preached by Jesus Christ."

Derby Hat Issue Fought Out on Battlefields

Jerusalem, Jan. 30 (AP)—In Asia's raging conflict over what the stylish young man will wear, derby hats and store clothes or turbans and the tribal robes of his fathers, the western world has lost another battle.

King Amanullah lost his Afghan throne over the pants and purdah issue, and now the Persian government has had to surrender on the subject of clothes to revolting tribes in Arabistan.

Forcible measures by the government, including a punitive expedition under Gen. Farahshallah Kahn, having proved unsuccessful, Shah Reza Khan is attempting a settlement by peaceful means.

As a gesture of peace, he has cancelled the order nicking the wearing of European hats compulsory, and has contented himself with a declaration that his subjects may wear either hats or turbans.

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP)—The Countess of Lauderdale died here today at her winter home "Villa Azura." She was the former Gwendoline Gaughan Williams of England and was a leader of the foreign contingent in Palm Beach society.

U. S. Society Girl Weds Briton at Cairo

Manchester, Iowa, Jan. 30 (INS)—Miss Virginia Carr, popular society girl of this city, and Smith College graduate, has been married to Thomas H. Borland of London, England, at Cairo, Egypt, according to a message received today by her father, Robert Carr.

The couple met while Miss Carr was a teacher in the American University at Beirut, Syria, and Borland was the manager of a British oil company.

BELIEVE YOUTH WAS SLAIN IN LIQUOR FEUD

Hi-jackers or warring bootleggers, taking a victim for a midnight "ride in the country," were responsible for a murder revealed today by the discovery of an unidentified youth's body in a barn on the Derby estate, Derby lane, Revere, police believe.

Four bullets had been fired through the murdered man's head at point blank range examination disclosed. The victim's face was blackened by powder burns, but the neatly arranged clothing on the body showed no signs of a struggle.

An automobile crank, found near the barn door, indicated that the the barn for years. Apparently the crank set used to smash the lock of the barn door.

The body, when it was found today by John Connell, caretaker of the estate, was sprawled across the seat of an old farm wagon. Absence of blood in the vicinity convinced police that the shooting had been done elsewhere. Connell visited the barn at dark last night, finding all in order at that time.

Two young men, longing for here, passed an abandoned butcher shop on 67th st. and immediately went into conference over the possibilities of beef. They pried open the door, donned white aprons, telephoned Armour & Co. to send over a supply of beef, and then waited.

Armour & Co. delivered $155 worth of beef. The dishonest young men handed the driver a check and he departed. The beef went out the back door and into the young men's own automobile. The $155 check wasn't the slightest bit good.

Doubt Drummond Will Get U. S. Post

London, Jan. 30 (INS)—"No official decision has been reached, it was announced at the foreign office today when attention was called to a report printed by the Daily Express that Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general of the League of Nations, may succeed Sir Esme Howard as British ambassador at Washington.

It is understood unofficially there is no prospect of Sir Eric Drummond's appointment.

DRUG PARLEY TO BE HELD IN NEW YORK

New York, Jan. 30 (INS)—A world conference for discussion of the narcotic problem to which official representatives from every nation will be invited is to be held in New York next November, it was announced today.

The conference will be held under the auspices of the Narcotic Rehabilitation Association Inc.

The program of the conference will include discussion of the best means of securing international cooperation in the control of the production of opium and other narcotics, suppression of illegal traffic in drugs, prevention of their illicit use through scientific public enlightenment, further legislation controlling possession and sale and the rehabilitation of addicts.

The association is endeavoring to adapt the Porter narcotic bill, signed recently by President Coolidge, to a program of state legislation. It is seeking the enactment of state laws to provide model farms for narcotic addicts in each section of the country where the problem is acute.

GIRL MOTHER IS HELD IN BABY DEATH CASE

Weak and trembling, the mother of an infant whose body she kept in a hotel room for three weeks stood in municipal court today and heard Judge Michael J. Creed refuse to pass judgment until she had had medical attention and rest.

The girl mother, Miss Sadie Curran, 18, of Bowen st., South Boston, was arrested after the body of the infant had been found on a closet shelf in a downtown hotel.

According to her story, the father is a former employe in another Hub hotel, but she refused to name him.

"This is the most unfortunate case that ever has come before my," said Judge Creed when she was arraigned, charged with concealing a body.

"What this unfortunate child needs is protection and medical attention. She is no criminal. We will hold the prosecution in abeyance until she is given proper care and is able to tell her story.

"I want the proper officials to get in touch with Dr. Coburn at the Charles st. jail and inform him that this girl is on her way down there. I know he will take a personal interest in the case."

According to the girl's story to police, the baby was born to her in the hotel room on January 8 at noon. She was staying in the room of Miss Catherine Connolly, an employe, but Miss Connolly told police she did not know of the birth until yesterday.

ROBERT AMORY LEADS TEXTILE TARIFF DRIVE

Washington, Jan. 30 (INS)—Spokesmen for the textile industry of the nation came before the House Ways and Means Committee today with pleas for tariff increases.

"Imports of the finer yarns and cloths represent one-fourth of the entire production of this type of materials in our mills, said Robert Amory of Boston, spokesman for the National Council of American Cotton Manufacturers.

"Many thousands of persons now idle would be employed if there were adequate tariff protection. The changes we seek are designed to permit American manufacturers to compete in the finer quality of goods and not to exclude all imports.

ON FINER GOODS

"The imports of fine goods and yarns is not only very large compared with domestic production, but they seriously affect domestic prices and the results have been little or no profits and have tended to force down the wages paid in the mills.

Albert R. White of North Dighton, Mass., said that 1922 rates on finished cloth of higher grade was for the most part satisfactory but urged increases in some items. For Venitilia he suggested an increase from 10 to 25 per cent ad valorem.

Urging relief to Lawrence, Lowell, Fall River and New Bedford, Mass., but mentioning no duties, Mayor Landers of Lawrence painted a doleful picture of conditions in those cities. He said 4500 persons were out of employment because of closed factories, others were working two to four days a week and 2300 houses and 400 stores were vacant on account of an exodus of population.

He placed investment in textile business in the four cities at $150,000,000; employes at 27,000, and the weekly payroll at $650,000.

1700 DRIVERS IN R. R. CROSSING CRUSADE NET

Registrar of Motor Vehicles George A. Parker said today that he had taken disciplinary action against 1700 automobilists within two weeks for failing to operate slowly and cautiously over grade crossings, as required by law.

The drive of the registrar started when it became apparent that the death list this year at these danger points was increasing. Within a very short period, recognized, there have been nine deaths. In 1927 there was 19 killed and last year 21.

"At the same rate of frequency, our record of these accidents in Massachusetts for the year 1929 will be far higher than that of any previous year," he declared.

After stating that his inspectors are to continue concentrating on the 1060 grade crossings, only 965 of which are protected, he said:

"Death is waiting for our motorists at these places. Some day in the far distant future the crossings may be eliminated. But for the present it is up to our motorists to 'Stop, Look and Listen.'"

Woman Near Death Under Trolley Car

Mrs. Mary Cunningham, 60, of Gerald rd., Brighton, escaped death only by inches today when she fell under a trolley car at Commonwealth ave. and Foster st., Brighton. The front trucks were less than a foot away from the woman when Motorman Peter O'Brien succeeded in stopping the car.

She was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital suffering from lacerations to the head, arm and leg, and possible concussion of the brain.

MELLON CALLS NEW DRY FUND PLAN FUTILE

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP)—Secretary Mellon in a letter to Chairman Anthony of the House appropriations committee today reiterated his opinion that the proposal to appropriate an additional $24,000,000 to enforce prohibition would not accomplish the purpose intended.

The secretary said that under the terms of the amendment the fund would not be available for any purpose except that of increasing the personnel of the bureau of prohibition and the department of justice. It could not be used for an educational campaign, he declared and even such essential incidental expenses as rent, office equipment, supplies and traveling expenses could not be paid from it.

The House rules committee today approved a plan for sending the deficiency appropriation bill, with the controversial prohibition and tax refund amendments, to conference for smoothing out differences between House and Senate.

Immediately after this decision Representative Tilson of Connecticut, Republican House leader, said the question probably would be taken up in the House tomorrow and while ordinarily debate would be limited to one hour, he was willing that a longer time be used.

Hold Conference On Church Merger

Pittsburgh, Jan. 30 (AP) Overtures of the Methodist Episcopal Church of America looking toward a merger with the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, drew leaders of both denominations to Pittsburgh today.

Bishop Herbert Welch, Pittsburgh, headed representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Presbyterian Church was represented by members of the General Assembly's Department of Church Co-operation and Union, of which Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, Princeton, N. J., is chairman. Leaders of the Methodist Episcopal Church have requested such a merger.

Calls on Women to Aid in Defending U. S.

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP)—Col. C. B. Robbins, assistant secretary of war, told the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense today that mobilization plans of the United States Army call for 4,075,320 officers and men for six field armies. He also told the conference its support could be of great benefit in carrying out the work of national defense.

Detailing the growth and purpose of the National Guard, the Officers' Reserve Corps, the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and the Citizens' Military Training Camps, Col. Robbins said these civilian components of the Army would become the great reliance of the nation in a future emergency.

"The fact so many thousands of our youth are willing to voluntarily take the military training that they may fit themselves for the grim business of war," he said, "is one of the finest indications that we can have that the heart of the country is sound, that loyalty and patriotism are not mere words, and that the continuous efforts of the pacifists and internationalists to destroy our national defense are without avail."

AUDIENCE WAXES ENTHUSIASTIC ON SECOND NIGHT OF OPERA

"JUDITH" EXCELLENTLY DONE; "DON PASQUALE" FAILS

By MOSES SMITH

For its second evening of opera in Boston, the Chicago Civic Opera Company offered an unfamiliar double bill including the almost century-old "Don Pasquale" of Donizetti and the one-act "Judith" by the ultra-modernist, Arthur Honegger.

The audience, which, of course, filled the house, was enthusiastic in marked contrast to the opening night. Most of its plaudits were bestowed on the opening work, "Don Pasquale."

The performance seemed to me a shabby one. There was as much point to becoming vociferous over the pedestrian singing and staging of this piece as there was for the previous night's audience failing to acknowledge a production of "Lohengrin," better than has been seen here in many a long day. The fancies of operatic audiences are not easy to ponder. Let it be said, however, that there was at least some sign of appreciation for the excellent presentation of "Judith."

JUDITH EXCELLENT

It is a pleasure to write of "Judith." It served for this season's debut of Mary Garden, who is largely responsible for the inclusion of the opera in the Chicago company's repertoire, and who gave an inspired interpretation of the title role. The "superwoman," as James Huneker used to call her, can still sing as if time made no impression on her; this she demonstrated in the first scene, when her tones of beautiful quality floated over the chanting of the chorus.

But it was the music and the production that provided the chief thrills. If two impressions mean anything, Honegger has here discarded the pose in which he has so often vested himself, and, as in "King David," written from the heart. The orchestration is of magnificent effectiveness, rivalling the same composer's "Pacific 231" in virtuoso technique.

SCENIC BEAUTY

The production was lavish, to put it mildly. The individual scenic sets were of great beauty and made an important contribution to the psychological effect of the whole on the onlooker.

Of the singers, other than Miss Garden, Lucille Meusel, in the part of the servant, stood out with a clear and beautiful voice. The other parts were capably filled, if not with distinction.

Giorgio Polacco the master hand of this operatic contingent, made his first presence at the conductor's desk impressively felt during the entire course of the work. His task of leading the orchestra alone would have been a big one. In addition to this he whipped the chorus into almost a frenzy, at the same time never losing control of the reins. To him must go the major credit for the admirable singing of the chorus.

"Don Pasquale," was, frankly, a novelty for me. In this almost opera-less town it is no disgrace to admit this. Consequently I can speak with no authority with regard to certain aspects of the performance.

NEAR BURLESQUE

It seemed at times to border on the burlesque. And considering that the Chicago company has been known to err on this side in productions of similar works, such a conclusion seems not unwarranted.

The main difficulty is apparently that the company has not the performers capable of singing this style of music in the manner it merits or familiar with the traditions. Margherita Salvi, a Spanish singer making her first appearance here, was an exceedingly attractive and ingratiating Norina, but her voice, as heard last night, was of mediocre quality, and her singing was on the whole undistinguished. Charles Hackett, as Ernesto, displayed his familiar excellent tenor, but neither in bearing nor in vocal style did he fullfill the demands of the role he was playing. Giacomo Rimini, the scheming Malatesta, had not even the voice. To complete the cycle, Vittorio Trevisan in little part seemed most at home in this sort of thing, though he inclined to the farcical; and his singing, if such it may be called, was negligible.

"La Boheme" and "Aida" in Today's Two Bills

HOOVER WANTS NEW LIAISON OFFICER

This explains the pending request before Congress for an emergency appropriation of $10,000 for an additional White House secretary.

This official will be the liaison officer between the President and the independent organizations, both include the Veterans' Bureau, the Shipping Board, the Federal Water Power Commission and many others.

These agencies expend close to three-quarters of a billion dollars annually and the direction and supervision of their policies has added a burden on the President which President Coolidge and Mr. Hoover have agreed should be lightened as far as possible.

If Congress approves the recommendation for the additional appropriation made by Coolidge, Mr. Hoover, as President, will have three secretaries who will have equal rank. The new office will be parcelled the three major divisions of work in the executive offices.

TWAIN BURGLAR GETS 10 YEARS

Charged with being a habitual criminal, Charles E. Manes, 51, of New York, characterized in court as "the Mark Twain burglar," was sentenced today to 10 years at State prison.

Sentence was passed by Judge Frederick Fosdick in Middlesex Superior Court after Manes had made an almost tearful plea in defense. He said to Judge Fosdick:

"I am not guilty of any crime this time. I have been a bad man but I didn't have that pistol they say I had and I was minding my own business."

Judge Fosdick remarked that the majority of men up for sentence claim innocence, then imposed the 10 years.

Would Bar Hoover Men at Texas Polls

Austin, Tex., Jan. 30 (AP)—The State Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections voted to report favorably a bill which would keep supporters of Herbert Hoover from running for office in the next Democratic primary.

The proposal would require an aspirant for a place on the ballot, as a candidate for a county, district or state office to make an affidavit that he had supported all the party nominees in the last general election, or that he had not voted. Under the terms of the bill, Democrats who voted for Herbert Hoover would not be permitted to run for office on the Democratic ticket until 1932.

5 WILLS ENTER GIRL'S BATTLE FOR MILLIONS

Greenwich, Ct., Jan. 30 (INS)—A dozen attorneys gathered about the council table in probate court here today to fight over the $40,000,000 estate of the late Mrs. Margaret Huntington Smith McCarthy.

Before the battle had progressed an hour, five separate wills, made in the past three years by Mrs. McCarthy, had been cited in the complicated dispute.

From a contest begun by Miss Margaret Gowen, 18-year-old daughter of Cleveland, who was left $200,000 the fight was extended to include Western Reserve University and other claimants of large bequests.

The last will, which was made January 9 and filed for probate here, left most of the $40,000,000 fortune to Dr. James S. McCarthy, third husband of the wealthy woman.

Miss Gowen, daughter by the first marriage to the late Albert Y. Gowen of Cleveland, seeks to break her stepfather's fabulous inheritance on the grounds that her mother did not possess testamen tary capacity when the will was signed a few days before her death of pneumonia.

OUST HEAD OF CHILDS CO. IN WALL ST. ROW

New York, Jan. 30 (INS)—Wall Street thrilled today to another fight within its ranks when the Childs Company operators of a nationally known chain of restaurants, announced several sweeping changes in its executive personnel.

S. Willard Smith was removed as president and as a member of the executive committee and L. E. Duswell was relieved of his position as secretary and treasurer of the company. In addition to this several other changes in the management, including the abolishment of the executive committee, were announced.

In a specially prepared statement, William Childs, chairman of the board of directors, said:

"These changes will insure a management in harmony with the principles that have guided the Childs business since it was founded by my brother and myself 40 years ago. The company is in a very sound, prosperous condition.

The new officers of the company are William Childs, chairman of the board; Luther Childs, president; Ellsworth Childs, senior vice-president; W. S. Childs, second vice-president; Victoria Childs, secretary and treasurer.

'Hard Nut to Crack' Is Einstein's Book; 10 Years in Making

Berlin, Jan. 30 (AP)—The latest work of Prof. Albert Einstein, originator of the theory of relativity, was published today. It had been explained in advance as dealing with the relations between gravity and electrodynamics, and was said to have required 16 years for assimilation.

The work, consists of a six-page pamphlet, titled "Zur Einheitliche Feldtheorie."

It consists of words and mathematical formulae, which are totally incomprehensible to the ordinary layman. A learned professor of the Prussian Academy of Sciences described the work as "a very hard nut to crack," and said it called for the most careful study by the most expert mathematicians.

SIGNATURES PILE UP ON PETITION FOR GOODWIN INSURANCE BILL

MAILS BRING THOUSANDS TO EVENING AMERICAN OFFICE

Signatures to the petition calling upon the Massachusetts legislature to pass the Frank A. Goodwin-Boston Evening American bill to establish a State fund to provide automobile compulsory insurance at cost to the motorists of this State, are piling up in the office of this newspaper.

Thousands of signatures to the petition have reached the Boston Evening American office and every mail brings more.

Interest in the bill, which will bring about a saving of $7,500,000 yearly to Massachusetts motorists, is so active that many persons have written asking for long petition slips for circulation in shops and stores in the neighborhood. These have been gladly mailed by the Boston Evening American, and other readers who desire to circulate petitions among their friends may have some for the asking. Present indications are that this will be one of the biggest petitions ever presented to the Massachusetts Legislature.

That readers of this newspaper are strongly in favor of the Goodwin-American bill, under the terms of which a flat rate of $16 will be charged by the State as compulsory insurance on every passenger car, $25 on every truck and $50 on taxis, rental cars and buses, is shown by the letters being received.

J. E. Little, Jr., of 2 Wilbur st., Everett, writes: "Enclosed find signatures for your petition to the Legislature for relief from the unfair automobile insurance rates which now exist. More power to Frank A. Goodwin and the Boston Evening American. Compulsory insurance is necessary, but the present rates are very oppressive. Your plan appears to be sound and fair and should receive the support of every automobile owner in this State."

Sidney R. Williamson of 300 Ashmont st., Dorchester, writes: "You are fighting for a just cause. It is about time that the automobile owners obtained a 'break.' The present high and unnecessary rates are simply stopping the poor family man from giving his family the summer country rides. The Goodwin-American bill would solve the problem. Were it put to a vote at the next State election it would pass overwhelmingly. Where do our representatives stand on his measure? Why not have them write their views in the news papers? We are entitled to know how they stand."

Joseph Marcel of 34 Braintree ave., Quincy, writes: "I wish to endorse the Goodwin-American compulsory insurance plan. In my estimation present insurance rates are too high for the benefit derived."

Frank H. McLeod of 303 Sumuit ave., Brighton, writes: "Enclosed are three signatures to the petition asking the Legislature to pass the Goodwin-American insurance bill. Again we find Frank A. Goodwin and the Boston Evening American on the side of righteousness. In this age of graft and grafters it is refreshing to know there are men like Goodwin and newspapers like the Boston Evening American in existence. It is interesting to know there are men not for sale to the highest bidder."

Max and Bennie Ginns of 159 Talbot ave., Dorchester, write: "Enclosed please find signed petition for the Goodwin-American insurance bill. Believe us, every automobile owner should take off their hats to Goodwin and the Boston Evening American. This is one piece of legislation FOR THE PEOPLE."

Is your auto insurance costing you too much? Ought the law to compel you to furnish profits to private companies? Do the present zone rates seem fair to you?

Would you like the overhead cut from compulsory insurance?

Buckle Down to Job, Expert Advises

By LOUISE RICE
Noted Graphologist

DEAR MISS RICE: I have had almost every job that I am physically and mentally capable of holding and have had no success at anything and I am beginning to think that I am hopeless. You may publish this if you wish.

James H., Broosline.

Dear James H., I am going to give you a severe scoring-over. You will not like it at first, but your handwriting shows that you have a sense of justice and this I know will come to your rescue and show you that I am making statements to you which you ought to have made t yourself.

HAS PERSONALITY.

Your handwriting shows a good deal of positive talent, a fine mind and a personality which is probably interesting. But it does not show intelligent use of all this.

No one will know who you are, so I will go forward and explain this letter which you write to me and which I quote is very, very careless, James. Just look at the lack of punctuation, the carelessness in the use of words and the ineffective way in which you put your problem before me. If it were not that your handwriting shows character so well I should be at a loss as to what to say to you.

SUGGESTS SCHOOL

Now then, instead of trying different jobs, you buckle down to making good at one, staying with it, climbing up in it and gradually making a success of it.

It wouldn't hurt a bit for you to go to night school two or three nights a week, to brush up on your English, but especially to get the impetus of contact with eager and ambitious people.

You have real individuality and if you'll take this in good part and turn to such work as you can do, determined not to be beaten, you'll be a fine man.

* * *

SMALL, fine, delicate writing which is almost printed and in which the capitals are plain and small, the pressure even, the bars light but long, presents a picture which informs us, not only of the refinement of mind and spirit and body of the writer, but which tells us that there is the ideal person for the handling of books. Such people sell books, even in a department store, with enthusiasm; they are wonderful in stores handling rare editions; they are best of all as librarians who have the purchasing and stocking of libraries chiefly in hand.

Charges Husband Is Trespasser

Asking that her husband be restrained from interfering and trespassing on her property, Mrs. Mae B. Jones of Waltham brought a bill in equity in Middlesex Superior Court.

The bill, returnable February 1, sets forth that Mrs. Jones is living apart from her husband, Parris N. Jones, for justifiable cause, under a decree of the Middlesex Probate Court, dated December 5, and that the decree restrains her husband from imposing any restraint on her personal liberty.

Dog Team Mail at Lewiston Saturday

Mexico, Me., Jan. 30—After making extensive repairs to harnesses and sled the Pulsifer brothers of Minot left here for Livermore Falls with the first international dog team mail. The trip will end at Lewiston on Saturday.

Have Your Handwriting Analyzed

Send a sample of your handwriting to Miss Louise Rice, noted graphologist, for analysis. Write plainly on unruled paper, in ink or pencil, adding your usual signature.

To cover clerical costs, enclose 10c in silver or stamps. Also enclose a stamped, addressed envelope. The individual analysis will be returned to you within the period of one or two weeks.

Miss Rice replies only to such questions as can be answered through the science of graphology. Write your name and address on both the sample to be analyzed and the coupon below. Letters will not be published if sender so requests.

MISS LOUISE RICE,

OUSTING OF GEN. BOOTH HALTED BY COURT

London, Jan. 30 (INS) Justice Eve in chancery court today granted Gen Bramwell Booth an extended injunction restraining the Salvation Army high council from acting upon the resolution removing him from his generalship or appointing a successor. A temporary injunction had been in effect since January 8.

The injunction will stand until after a further meeting of the high council when Gen. Booth should have an opportunity of being heard.

Justice Eve, in delivering judgment, said:

"While it is not denied that the general's long absence through illness brought about serious results in the organization of the army, it was a mistake that Gen Booth was not given an opportunity for defending his case. Therefore the resolution of January 17 wherein the general was declared unfit cannot stand."

The high council's lawyer had maintained that the only question for the judge to decide was whether the general was justly treated.

Victory for Labor

Edinburgh, Scotland, Jan. 30 (AP)—Labor wrested a seat from the government in the by-election for the House of Commons in the northern division of Midlothian County, Andrew Clarke, Laborite winning the seat on the unemployment issue.

TROTZKY FACES EXPULSION IN SOVIET 'PLOT'

Berlin, Jan. 30 (INS)—The German Communist newspaper Rote Flag reported today that the Soviets will banish Leon Trotzky and his family from Soviet Russia because he is the leader of groups that are trying to overthrow the Soviet system and alienate the Red army.

According to the newspaper, Trotzky's expulsion is an act of revolutionary self defense. It added:

"Trotzky returns to the bourgeois, capitalist world and leaves the land of the October revolution, whose flag he betrayed."

The Soviety embassy in Berlin has not yet been informed of Trotzky's banishment. It neither confirms nor denies the report.

A CLEAR HEAD IN A MINUTE

"Breathe Naturally—After OZO Mist"

If stuffed up with a cold, breathe in OZO Mist and note that your head clears in a minute or less. Soon you can breathe comfortably—the nasal passages and eyes, ears, throat and vocal organs are relieved. Five medicinal fluids in a few drops of OZO Mist placed on handkerchief or pillow—evaporates like eight hours from one application. The pleasant vapor routs out germs and dissolves mucus. OZO Mist disinfects handkerchief, preventing personal reinfection. Get OZO Mist (50 applications 75c) at all druggists.

MUTINEERS GET DEATH PENALTY

Madrid, Jan. 30 (AP)—Rumors from Ciudad Real today were that seveeral sentences of death had been passed after a summary court-martial inquired into yesterday's artillery mutiny there.

An artillery general, who was the ringleader in the whole affair, was believed to have escaped over the Portuguese frontier.

The city, which was the scene of the principal rebellion, has been occupied by troops from Madrid under command of Gen. Orbaz. The general took all possible measures to maintain order. Some troops which left Madrid were returning to the capital.

Censorship prevents further details and a large number of dispatches have been suppressed. The mutiny was ended without the firing of a shot.

St. Brendan Society Plans Annual Ball

The St. Brendan Society will conduct its 24th annual ball in the Elks Hotel tomorrow night. Preceding the grand march there will be a concert, in which Charles F. Forrester and Mrs. Sarah Knighten will take part, and an exhibition of Kerry dancing by a select quartet for which the Kerry pipers, Daniel J. Murphy, will play. St. Brendan medals will be awarded the dancers by Exalted Ruler George Carran of the Boston Lodge of Elks.

President and Mrs. Michael R. Murphy will lead the grand march. Many friends from Worcester, Springfield, Providence, New York and other cities will attend.

HIGH PRICE OF PATRONAGE IS BARED

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP) Department of Justice reports that Perry Howard, suspended assistant attorney-general and Republican national committeeman for Mississippi, had deposits in two accounts here of more than $50 0% who his $8000 salary over a period of 18 months today were placed before the Senate patronage investigating committee.

In the Howard deposits, the Department of Justice reported it had found two checks for $500 each drawn at a Clarksdale, Miss., bank by Miller E. McGilchrist, of the Department, said one check was signed by Mrs. Cama Withington, of Tutweiler, Miss., and was dated June 23, 1927, the same day on which Howard recommended her as acting postmistress at Tutweiler. The other $500 check, he said, was drawn against the account of John H. Cook United States attorney in Mississippi.

McGilchrist said Cook explained that he loaned the $500 to the husband of Mrs. Withington and was later repaid.

Chairman Brookhart of the committee remarked that "this seems like a high price for a postmastership in such a small town."

The Justice Department reported also that John T. Risher, who shares an office with Howard here, had deposited about $14,000 in banks here between January 1, 1927, and October, 1927.

Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, demanded that Atty.-Gen. Sargent be summoned before the committee "to tell why this man Howard has not been discharged."

Fr. Quinn to Preach At St. Stephens

The Rev. Francis H. Quinn of St. Cecilia's Church, Back Bay, will preach at the Thursday devotions to St. Theresa in St. Stephen's Church, Hanover st. Novena services consisting of prayers, benediction and instruction will take place at 12:30, 3:30, 6:30 and 7:45 p. m.

Send It to Mr. Baker

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 30—Medina fellow is Postmaster John B. Mullan are is holding a letter addressed to "the best-looking postmaster in the U. S. A." Unless somebody claims it he will send it to the dead letter office.

It's Agin the Law, But It Won't Do at All

Repeal of obsolete laws which he said if proposed today would result in the appointment of a commission to examine the petitioner's sanity, was strongly urged at a legislative hearing today by former Assistant District Attorney Joseph J Leonard of Suffolk County.

Among the offending statutes cited by the speaker were these:

Designating as rogues and vagrants common pipers and fiddlers.

A felony for a resident to engage by previous appointment in a fight with a non-resident.

A criminal offense to wear a hatpin in public which protrudes more than one-half inch beyond the crown of the hat.

In ridiculing the laws of a bygone day which still clutter the general laws of the state, Leonard said in part:

"I may be urged that hatpins with ring protruding points may come again into vogue. So may hoop skirts, Prince Albert coats and snuff boxes. We do not enact legislation today to provide for remote and improbable contingencies."

He marveled that musical folk have never protested against the attack on the law books against the profession, and wonder if in the distant past there had been an epidemic of bicycle stealing comparable with the stealing of motor vehicles today.

Taking up the anti-fighting law he instanced where in 1870 Robert Barrett and Patrick Kelliher of Lawrence by previous appointment within the state did engage in a fight in Salem, New Hampshire, for which offense they were tried, convicted and the verdict was sustained by the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

218 NEW CASES OF INFLUENZA ARE REPORTED

There were 218 new cases of influenza reported today at the State Department of Health, a drop of 83 cases compared with yesterday's total.

The total number of cases reported for the month is 7827. For the entire year 1928 there were but 1305 cases.

Today's reports on lobar pneumonia showed 67 new cases, a decrease of 13 compared with Tuesday's reports. For the month to date 1285 cases have been reported. During the same number of days last year there were but 495 cases.

Deaths from lobar pneumonia for January up to the 28th, from cities and towns representing one-third of the state's population, totaled 263. This is more than double what the department expected, based on their experience tables.

ALL SECTIONS AWAKEN TO PROHIBITION EVILS IN UNITED STATES

ONE MOTHER HAS 6 VICTIMS OF LAW TO DRY NATION

"Being a fanatical dry is merely to wish the bootlegger and the speakeasy proprietor well in the purveying of their poisons. Let us stop undermining of public and privste morals by some kind of modification of existing federal law on prohibition."

"I am the mother of three sons and three daughters, ranging in age from 15 to 23. All of them drink, either openly or surreptitiously. They are victims of prohibition. Praise God that Mr. Hearst and his newspapers have undertaken this $25,000 temperance prize contest, which we all pray may result in what Mr. Hearst seeks, a really workable temperance plan."

The above are random selections from the thousands of letters accompanying competitive plans entered in the temperance prize contest, which reveal a significant cross section of American public sentiment. Such letters are showering upon the Boston headquarters of the contest at the Boston Evening American offices.

BAY STATER'S VIEWS

A contestant of Foxboro, Mass., writes: "Nearly all governments at various times, since organized and civilized society began, have issued prohibitive commandments against the customs of their peoples. Every such prohibition concerning a matter of personal choice has caused endless trouble and wars, such as our own American revolution.

"Prohibition is another unenforceable commandment which has no relation to civilization, for it has nothing in common with true temperance. Prohibition is as confiscatory of private rights as any imposition of King George III upon the American colonies and vastly more destructive."

The press of the nation, aside from the Hearst newspapers, is commenting in increasing degree upon the prohibition problem. The following excerpt is from an editorial in the Philadelphia Public Ledger:

"A TIMELY OFFER"

"There is growing in Congress and throughout the country a feeling that something may really have to be done about prohibition and that the present state of the enforcement problem is not only a national disgrace, but a national danger. Congress, like many large sections of the country, doesn't seem to care greatly whether we have prohibition or not, so long as we have prohibition laws. It makes one gesture with its right hand and another with its left."

Opinionative comment on the contest follows:

HENRY HUDSON, Mayor of Hudson, N. Y.: "The country has received with gratification the news that William Randolph Hearst has offered a $25,000 prize to the person suggesting the best plan for modification of existing law and substitution of a new law which the American people can respect and which public officials can enforce. I believe Mr. Hearst's timely offer of a prize to induce the best thought on the subject will please the great majority of our people, and I ardently hope that a solution will be found by means of the contest which will end the present disrespect not only for the prohibition law, but many other laws."

CAPT. WILLIAM BELL WAIT, New York lawyer: The only solution to this question of prohibition is either repeal or a broad modification. If we are to have any semblance of the liberty of our forefathers planned for us, then we must have personal liberty first of all. My feeling and observation is that the dissent from Volsteadism is growing by leaps and bounds. Many terrible effects have followed prohibitive measures. They are morally wrong, illegal and unconstitutional.

The last election was no barometer of public feeling. The people voted for prosperity, unmindful of the other issues. Scores of my own friends, who feel strongly against prohibition, voted against the alleged wet side. The Hearst plan for modification is excellent and will cause a widespread comment on the subject and in this way open the question to a solution. I feel sure, that because of Mr. Hearst's generous donation of a large prize, Nation-wide interest will bring about such a solution.

WANT SOLUTION

THE REV. DR. HERBERT G. CODDINGTON, rector, Grace Episcopal Church, Syracuse, N. Y.—Mr. Hearst's contest is most timely. It is sure to bring about much good and it is quite in harmony with the suggestions made by our new President. The generous prize will insure a really deep consideration of the subject.

THE REV. DR. EDWARD L. KELLER, Pastor of the First Lutheran Church and president of the Ministers' Association, Syracuse N. Y.—The contest which Mr. Hearst has initiated is sure to center the attention of the people upon the movement to bring about some real understanding of the liquor situation. There may be some constructive ideas proposed that will point out methods of dealing with the problem. Radio amateurs brought most of the developments which were of real use in perfecting the radio, and this may true in the case of doing something for prohibition."

DR. CLARA P. BEALL, physician and prominent clubwoman, Syracuse, N. Y.—"Personally, I am very much in favor of Mr. Hearst's plan to bring about temperance by education. I thoroughly approve of his temperance prize contest and it seems that he must be a man of deep thought, since he has obviously gone into the matter from all angles. His statements regarding the prize plan show a careful study of our great national problem."

DIES NEAR HOME ON HIS WAY TO HOSPITAL

Jacob Pearlman, 70, of 1210 Blue Hill ave., died in front of his home today while walking to a taxicab that was to take him to Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

Pearlman was operated on at the hospital four weeks ago and has been visiting the hospital almost daily ever since as an outpatient.

He ordered a cab today and was being aided across the sidewalk by the driver, Saul Sanders of 1416 Blue Hill ave., when he suddenly collapsed in Sanders' arms.

The taxi driver carried Pearlman back into the house and Dr. Charles Rice of 1222 Blue Hill ave. was called. He pronounced him dead.

Children's Colds Doubly Dangerous While Flu Lasts

Treat Them Promptly but be Careful not to Upset Stomach with Too Much Dosing

PNEUMONIA CHIEF DANGER

Although the type of flu this year is not so serious as in 1918 health authorities are urging everybody to treat even the slightest cold at the start, as colds lower the resistance and make the body an easy prey to bronchitis or pneumonia.

Too much "dosing" especially in the case of children still further disturbs the digestion, and should be avoided except on advice of a physician.

Vicks VapoRub is especially valuable because it is applied externally and so can be used freely at the first sign of a cold, with no risk of disturbing a delicate stomach.

Rubbed on the throat and chest at bedtime, Vicks acts two ways at once to check the cold and avoid serious complications. (1) through the skin like a poultice, and (2) by means of its medicated vapors, released by body-warmth and inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages.

Foxboro Entrant Calls Prohibition Unenforceable

An entrant in the Hearst $25,000 temperance plan offer has this to say of existing dry laws:

"Prohibition is another unenforceable which has no relation to civilization, for it has nothing in common with true temperance."

Death Sentence for 3 Revolt Leaders

Madrid, Jan. 30 (INS)—Three of the leaders in the "artillery revolt" against the Spanish Government at Ciudad Real were sentenced to death by a court martial today. The sentences have been sent to King Alfonso for his approval.

Madrid, Jan. 30 (AP)—Following yesterday's military revolt of the Tory party, Sanchez Guerra was arrested today in Valencia. He was detained at the quarters of the captain-general of the district. His son is chief officer of the port of Valencia.

Famous Recipe For Stopping a Severe Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, soothes away the inflammation, and loosens the germ-laden phlegm. At the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

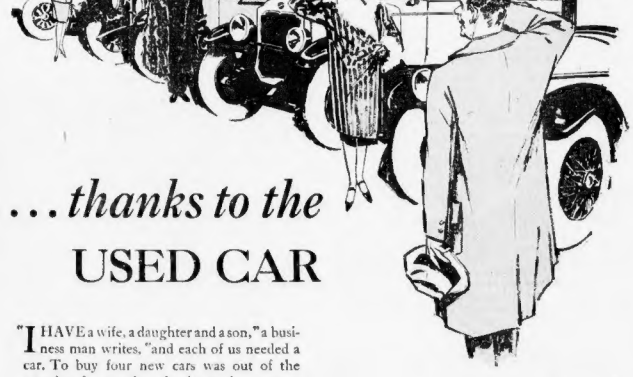
"COMPLETELY MOTORIZED"



...thanks to the USED CAR

"I HAVE a wife, a daughter and a son," a business man writes, "and each of us needed a car. To buy four new cars was out of the question for me, but thanks to the present-day bargains in used cars, my family has been completely motorized at surprisingly small expense."

A rather unusual family, but the idea is not new. Very many American families in all circumstances have found in the used car an economical means of enjoying the convenience of two- and three-car ownership. For a used car is unused transportation which may be enjoyed by the next owner at an attractive price.

Used cars are opportunities

A good automobile is built to stand years of use. It will provide many thousands of miles of transportation. But only occasionally are all its years and all its mileage used up by one owner.

The cars which General Motors dealers are taking in trade offer great opportunities to buy unused transportation at low cost. The convenience of the GMAC Plan of Payment is available.

How Jamaica Plain Club Bought Home

"If we want it enough, we can have it."

That is what the Jamaica Plain Tuesday Club said when it heard that the historic old Loring-Greenough mansion was about to be torn down for real estate development, back in 1924.

How these courageous clubwomen bought and paid $64,000 for the beautiful Colonial mansion in a period of three years, forms one of the most inspiring records in all club history.

The house, built in 1758 by Commodore Loring of the British Navy, was already being dismantled when agitated clubwomen arrived to plead with the widow of the last David Greenough to permit their club to buy and preserve it for posterity.

All the century-old elms were to be cut to make way for a street, apartment houses and stores. The hand-carved spindle staircase and massive front door were to be taken out, also some of the original panelling brought from England. The rest was to be torn down or remodelled on another site.

CONTRIBUTIONS FOUR IN

The club saw what a possibility for community life the spacious home offered and straightway set out to raise funds for its purchase. The women worked—how they worked!—and the business men took notice.

Contributions began pouring in as their goal became known, and local decorators each contributed reproductions of Colonial wall papers and paint for the rooms and halls.

The first "housewarming," lasting three days, netted $2800.

A goodly sum was earned the first year by dividing the club into teams of ten with captains, each pledged to earn $25.

A Trash and Treasure Shop, run for three weeks, brought in $441. House rentals aggregated $240, and the barn brought in rent for garage.

Perhaps the most steady source of revenue has been the Tea Shop, which last year netted $900. A Gift Shop earned $611 the first year and is still going strong.

BURNED MORTGAGE.

One of the sources of pleasure and revenue is the Antique Shop up under the time-stained rafters where antique collectors come to make rare glass or Colonial china. Antique dealers furnished the rooms.

Bridge and card parties netted $614 the first season and these are still popular with women who love the quiet dignity of the beautiful old home.

In all, these resourceful women found 42 ways to raise money to pay off the mortgage they had assumed so blithely.

After it had run along for three years, Mrs. Thomas G. Rees, then president, declared it should be burned that year. She was a moving spirit in an intensive three weeks' campaign, during which the last $20,000 was raised. The mortgage was burned with much ceremony.

Today the house where General Greene once had his headquarters, and which later served as a hospital for the Continental Army, is the pride for all who admire the heirlooms of a sturdy past.

It is the scene of weekly teas for the Tuesday Club and has become a second "Wayside Inn" for luncheon and dinner parties.

VISITS SWITZERLAND

"Red geraniums . . . women washing clothes in the cold lake water, kneeling and gossiping as they scrubbed . . . child re[illegible] selling flowers at every stra[illegible] point . . . 'Walking the Plank' in a flooded Swiss village, sunrise from the Rigi . . . men wearing green with a cocky [illegible] . . . queer shutters . . . old bridges . . . the astrological clock the Bon of La Cerne . . . and lakes, unbelievably blue lakes . . . marvelous gorges . . . snow capped Alps . . . Chalon Castle . . . wood carving . . . bears . . . clouds"

These are some of the thoughts that lingered when Mrs. Arthur Ropes concluded "The Spell of Switzerland" that held 250 members of the Jamaica Plain Tuesday Club for an hour and a half.

The lecture was illustrated with views of Switzerland taken while Mrs. Ropes was on a trip through that country recently.

Mrs. Malcolm Nichols, now in superb health, was in the audience, proud of her talented aunt, Mrs. Ropes.

HANNAH HALLOWELL AND NELSON BIGELOW WED TODAY—BETTY ALDEN

Noon Ceremonial in Old First Parish Church, Milton

JANUARY'S CRISP AIR TODAY carried at noon the peal of wedding bells, in contrast to operatic high notes, and maidens in fresh, crisp geranium taffeta walked before a bride who was as charming as she is socially important. Miss Hannah Hallowell and Nelson Bigelow exchanged their solemn vows of matrimony, and Milton's old First Parish Church was all aflutter with those who occupy topmost places in the social structure along with parents of bride and bridegroom, the N. Penroses Hallowelle and Henry Forbes Bigelow. And very few are the Bostonians of consequence who have not either kin or friendship tie with these lines, and who will not be in evidence at the nuptial rites.

SPEEDING THE BRIDEGROOM smilingly along the rose-strewn path of matrimony was something that pleasantly occupied Nelson Bigelow's trio of brothers. Edward L. Bigelow, who not long ago wedded with Mrs. Oliver Ames, Jr. (Caroline Fessenden), Chandler Bigelow and E. Thayer Bigelow were hosts last evening at the Milton Club for the wedding principals and the bridal party, an affair done with the utmost informality. Quality is a term unknown within the confines of that attractive clubhouse, that Miltonians of place frequent almost whenever the spirit moves.

THIS NOON CHANDLER BIGELOW STOOD IN the best man's place with his brother Nelson, the bridegroom, before the plain and unadorned altar of the First Parish Church. Edward L. Bigelow and Thayer Bigelow were a duo in the usher squad, a group that brought together young men perfectly at home in the art of seating dowagers with dignity and escorting debutantes to a rapid fire of badinage. Lloyd O. Vernon Mann, R. Colgate Vernon Mann, Henry F. Upham Harris, Robert K. Thayer, Caspar de Gersdorff and Douglas Busk of the brigade hail from Manhattan. Alfred Codman also claims Manhattan, although as son of the former Mrs. Lovell Codman he belongs closely to Boston's Four Hundred.

GEORGE T. RICE AND ROBERT CUTLER ARE to the Boston manner born. So too are the Hallowell sons, N. Penrose Hallowell, Jr., and Alfred Hallowell, two youthful brothers of the bride to escort her on her bridal way. Also of the Hallowell line in the entourage was Mrs. John Crocker, who was Mary Hallowell; Miss Ellen Hallowell (to be a bride in June), and Miss Margaret Hallowell, a girl still in the sub-debutante stage that is just now more closely concerned with French verbs than with the social limelight's thrills.

OF FRENCH INSPIRATION MOLDED TO BOSTON moderns by a clever Boylston st. modiste were the gowns, the bride's cream satin and exquisite family lace, and the glowing frocks and smart chapeaux of the six attendants. Miss Edith Parker and Miss Margery Richardson of Boston were attendants, by right on long and intimate friendship with the bride. Miss Ruth Trafford of New York was sixth in the coterie.

SENTIMENTALITY AND BEAUTY MINGLED IN the bride's raiment, the two notes every girl weaves into her wedding finery. The conventional satin was a lovely gleaming fabric mellowed to rich cream tint and there was a train of fragile Honiton lace, a family possession that has adorned other Hallowell brides and so combines both sentiment and beauty. Mr. N. Penrose Hallowell gave his daughter in marriage in a church where ecclesiastical elaborateness is nil and deep, old fashioned window casements provided an advantageous spot to clinster bright blossoms as accent for the brides-maids' golden yellows.

HIGH PLACE IN THE WINTER'S SCHEME OF philanthropic endeavor goes to the ice carnival. And well may this be so, when Boston affords two such splendid fields of shining ice as the Arena and the Garden. The plaudits for tonight's ice pageant at the Arena for Elizabeth Peabody House scarcely die out when busy young men of the Crosscup-Pichon Post take the field and boom a gigantic affair to benefit the Massachusetts department of the Legion. Wise in the ways of benefits, they aim to provide something entirely different than has gone before. And to do it on Valentine's Day.

French Motif in Gowns of Bridal Attendants

METROPOLITAN PROFESSIONAL attractions of first star magnitude will be brought over from New York to furnish the thrill and spectacle demanded. Local amateurs may be induced to shine in the galaxy, and they are always a drawing card when eights and scrolls and double spirals are to be executed with dash and perfection. And in the hands of prominent men, the patron and patroness list will mount to impressive proportions. Elton S. Draper heads the quartet and his associates are Sinclair Weeks, Benjamin Tucknor and Lincoln Bayles. Dollars should flow in a steady stream and interest should run deeply.

BRINGING A BIT OF THE Grand Central Galleries to repose in the Boston Art Club is more or less a feat, and puts a feather in the cap of the clever gentleman who manipulated the strings. The painting fraternity and those who delve with plastic clay set up a rival to operatic thrills this afternoon and staged a tea and private view at the club. And the worlds of society and the arts that meet and mingle constantly were on hand.

LADIES BEHIND THE TEA urns who rotated in the gentle act of serving the five o'clock tea included notables in the social scheme—and wives of prominent artists. Mrs. Philip L. Hale, Mrs. William A. Gaston, Mrs. Ezra Ripley Thayer, Mrs. Edward Cabot Storrow, Mrs. I. Tucker Burr with Mrs. Butler Ames and Mrs. Oakes Ames were on the list. Mrs. Frank G. Allen, the new First Lady of the Commonwealth, also lent her official presence to the occasion.

LA BOHEME WENT ITS MELODIOUS way this afternoon in the Opera House with an audience distinctly "Young Set" filling the plush chairs in orchestra and horseshoe. Mrs. H. Bristow Draper had young guests, so did the H. Wendell Endicotts; the small daughter, Miss Martha Endicott, being of an age to enjoy grand opera when it is so merrily tuneful as is Boheme. The Hugh Bancrofts in their high place in the horseshoe filled their box with the younger element, and Mrs. Sidney Winslow likewise inclined to youthful guests for her box group.

WOMEN GUESTS AT CARD PARTY

A somewhat elaborate social program has been arranged by the Boston Square and Compass Club starting with a whist party for members and women guests tonight.

President Terhune has prepared an entertainment for Saturday night, when the Boston Square and Compass Club Minstrels will again entertain. The weekly concert will be given Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock, when the Hernandez brothers will be assisted by Senorita Elmira Ortiz, soprano.

Plans are under way for a week's trip to Washington and Atlantic City. The party will leave here March 4, and will attend the Hoover inauguration.

GUARDS FREE IN KILLING OF ELK

Elmira, N. Y., Jan. 30 (INS)—Both Boatswain Frank L. Beck and Surfman Glen Jennings, coastguardsmen, charged with second degree manslaughter for the fatal shooting of Jacob D. Hansen, Buffalo Elks' official, are free men today.

Jennings gained his liberty, temporarily at least, today when a jury failed to agree on a verdict after deliberating more than 20 hours. Beck was discharged by Judge Hazel yesterday for insufficient evidence.

When the jurymen filed into court, tired and weary, at 9 o'clock today and said they had been unable to reach a verdict, Judge Hazel quickly dismissed them with an expression of thanks for their services.

Jennings was unaffected by the failure of the jurors to reach a decision and made no statement.

Hub Druggists to Entertain Ladies

The annual "ladies' night" of the Boston Retail Druggists' Association will be held this evening at the Elks' Hotel. Carl G. A. Harring, new president, and Joseph A. Martin, chairman of the entertainment committee, will present a program following the dinner at 6:30.

Included in the list of invited guests are Mrs. Martin E. Adamo, president of the Women's Association of the Boston Retail Druggists; Patrick J. Cuddyer, president of the Massachusetts State Pharmaceutical Association; James T. Finneran, executive member of the National Association of Retail Druggists; William J. UTILITIES IN WALL STREET LEADERSHIP

By W. S. COUSINS

New York, Jan. 30—Looking over the stock list today, the utilities appeared to be most attractive to the rank and file of Wall Street speculators, who accordingly sold the steel corporation shares and switched issues to buy gas and electric light, power and traction stocks.

The first list went down and the utility stocks went up in a market that had little to boast about from either end of the fence.

The big bears tried again to upset the market on the failure of the Steel Corporation directors to declare an extra or special dividend at yesterday's meeting, but nobody had taken the extra-dividend rumors seriously and nobody was genuinely surprised over the directors' action.

Time enough for that when earnings are bigger than the approximately $12 per share earned in 1928. Steel sold off about 2 points and under 182.

American Telephone led the high-priced utilities, with a new 5-point jump to 222, only one point the highest price on record, and comparing with a low of 45½ last year.

New gains of 1 to 3 points were scored by Utilities Power and Light, Electric Light and Power, National Power and Light and other well-known utility shares.

What has been discovered and their best efforts to send prices downward were producing much smaller results, they shifted their tactics in the early afternoon and once more went over to the buying side of the market.

Brought about moderate rallies, reduction of the early losses particularly in stocks which had fallen the greatest distance since Monday.

The oils were again on the "blue list" for most of the active traders, new and unimagined competitive production in crude oil upsetting both the Standards and Independents.

Aside the market showed up on slightly falling prices. Small traders are apparently more worried than they were a week ago today than they were over a 12 per cent rate in December.

A 67 per cent increase in the December net earnings of the first National Bank of California, San Francisco Commission failed to stimulate much speculative buying of the railroad shares. New York Central at 194¼ was down 5 points from the high of the week.

The foreign exchange markets were generally favorable and commodity markets steady. Call money reversed at 7 per cent, then rose to 8

Better Outlook Seen for Oils

"Outlook for an improvement in the oil industry during 1929 offers encouraging prospects," said Dr. Kenneth R. Kingsbury of Standard Oil Co. of California, returning aboard the S.S. Aquitania from a business trip to Europe. "Renewed tendency towards over-production in some fields," he continued, "will of course, reflect itself in a general retarding of progress which would otherwise be setting in at this time, however. I am fully convinced that the over-production situation can be competently dealt with within the industry and some satisfactory solution found to remedy this disturbing condition."

Commenting upon affairs of Standard Oil of California, Dr. Kingsbury stated the company was showing very satisfactory progress and that prospects for the current year were encouraging.

HOW NEW LAWS HANDICAP BUSINESS

By FRANK H. METCON,
Financial Editor

An observation recently appeared in a [illegible] to the effect that the railroads [illegible] business. President Ripley of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe System and President Stickney of the Chicago & North Western Railway joins in out protest against too much legislative handicapping business. Distinguished leaders, legal restrictions placed upon the railroads, President Sargent says, "Our law making system in the United States has outrun all experience in the production of a multitude of laws. The railroads have received more than their share of attention by the law making bodies until some legal regulation or restriction affects almost every department of railroad activity.

"The estimate of the number of general statutes and those on the statute books of our forty eight states is more than three hundred million, and this number is increasing by yet the rate of over two hundred thousand. The last seventy Congress enacted 931 laws, the Sixty eighth, 906 laws. Out of this great aggregation it is reported that in a single year 1,807 bills affecting railroads were introduced in the legislatures of forty three states and that 377 became laws."

Mr. Sargent says: "I feel that I am fully justified in suggesting that it is very fact that the railroads today are carrying the commerce of the country with an efficiency unequalled in any previous period of the world's history, is evidence of their tremendous vitality in the face of having been subjected by new restrictions which do not affect other industries.

Prediction that gasoline will be obsolete within this century as fuel for automobiles in favor of [illegible] is made before congress was made by the auto show by Preston Williams, of Marmon Motor Car Co. He prophesied that automobiles will be operated electrically through radio equipment, power being furnished by central generating stations. Savage engineers are now considering plans for such automobiles. Elimination of moving parts and consequent economies, mounting of maintenance costs, simplicity of the drive, and greater acceleration and deceleration thereby speeding up traffic, will result from radio cars, he predicted.

The production made by President Williams appeared in the [illegible] about two years ago. It was printed as a result of research, and recent work being carried on by leading scientists. The cars, however, is not expected to come speedily. Prominent scientists have declared it "impossible" just as they did the wonders of the radio and automobile.

American cotton manufacturers and farmers need an adequate tariff on jute and jute products to protect domestic markets for heavy cotton textiles from ruinous invasion by jute manufacturers in India, according to analysis of this competition made for Association of Cotton Textile Merchants of New York. Leavelle McCampbell, who made the analysis, says: "Year by year this jute has been until today it is a mighty flood, stopping the outlet for our own textile fibers, stopping our cotton mills and throwing American workers out of employment."

The financial statement of the Wampanoag Mills at Fall River as of Dec. 31, last, showed a surplus of quick assets over quick liabilities of $685,530 or $19.63 less than was reported at the close of the previous year. At the annual stockholders' meeting, W. Frank Knowe president of the company, stated that there was little cause for optimism if the future is to be like the past. He said the greatest hope for the mill was the possibility of its inclusion in a cotton mill merger, which he hinted was being discussed and which would have no connection with the consolidation proposed by Homer Loring and his associates.

By W. S. COUSINS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—Will the big bull market, which has been riding roughshod over all opposition since the muddle of 1926 and carrying prices of its pets and favorites to unprecedented heights strike its first real snag and run into a prolonged decline in February, the traditional month for the upsets in the best regulated markets?

* * *

Millions of dollars of newly acquired profit of big and small investors, the Tom, Dick and Harrys of the cities towns and crossroads, have been plowed back into the security markets.

Enormous distribution of cash and stock dividends has fanned the up cultive fever of small investors and never in the history of the world's richest country have they been so richly rewarded for their faith and confidence in American corporations.

* * *

There is no mystery about the gigantic increase in industrial stock values over the past five years. The advancing market has simply reflected better business generally, with larger corporation earnings, liberal cash dividends stock split-ups by prosperous corporations, a huge increase in public wealth, partial elimination of the bucket shops, discontinuance of real estate gambling, and concentration of investment in the equity stocks, which carry the long share of the increased earnings and the surplus built up by successful corporations.

* * *

The financial pages have been telling the world about the enormous increase in value of the outstanding stock of such well known corporations as General Motors, United States Steel, New York Central, etc., over a period of two to five years. These reports could be duplicated a dozen times over by other corporations which have not yet basked in the spot light of public favor, and whose stock movements have been comparatively unknown to traders.

Reliable figures about American income and resources are no stagnering as to be believed by many. We are told that American wages amount to about 60 billion dollars a year, of which

by WINIFRED VAN DUZER

Six-Day Novel by a Famous Author

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Mary Smith, a country girl, visiting her rich uncle, Sherwood Ring, in New York, wakened after midnight by a premonition that something was wrong in the big Fifth ave. house, slips downstairs, revolver in hand. She discovers a red-headed burglar trying to open the library safe. She makes him throw up his hands and tell her the story of his life, then she lets him go. Later, with her lovely cousin, Iris, the latter's fiance, Cosmo Snedden, and Junior Ring, Mary goes to The Emerald, a gangsters' rendezvous, on a slumming party. There she sees the red headed burglar and learns his name is Danny Mullins and that he is known as "The Spook." Danny is fascinated with Iris Nell Cody, a dancer at The Emerald, in love with Danny, warns him to look out for Coky Jones, an ex-convict, who wants to get back into the Spook's gang. The Spook takes part in a bank robbery and with one of his companions is recognized by Mary, who by accident happens to witness the holdup. She decides to tell the police.

She changes her mind. Iris keeps meeting The Spook and Mary seeing tragedy ahead calls him up and persuades him to promise to tell Iris the truth about himself. Meanwhile Junior Ring proposes to Mary. She refuses him. The Spook is warned by his gang that they must get rid of Coky Jones. The Rings decide to go to their country estate, Ring Acres, and Mary concludes to go with them.

CHAPTER 3

RING Acres was more like a castle than a country house. No newspaper reached the family the next morning, so they missed the story of the sensational raid of the Yorkville Wolves. The whole city was roused against gangdom and a great cry went up to rid the town of criminals. Danny Mullins and the gang piled into a closed car, eight of them next day and skipped to the country.

They were going up-state, to what Danny called his "farm," a country place he had come by in a moment of unsatisfactory security and he was looking forward with keen anticipation to the privilege of being free from police interest. Tony, the gang's lawyer, was to visit them every three weeks, a month, letting largely and enjoying a new set of leisure.

Swinging into private drive Danny nodded toward high stone chimneys at the south. "Throw shoes again a that is, Spook? Your bunkie friend some goofy moniker they got for it, but it's a little joint."

The girls went swimming in the big pool. Mary, feeling lazily rested that there was another lot of excellence, something for her "perspective." These the rich!

"What's strange about that, dear? And why do you call it 'Mystery Place'?"

"Everybody does because nobody can find out anything about it. It's nearly always closed. Sometimes there are lights at night, but it's dead in the daytime." She was strangely excited, looking at the boathouse.

Swinging into a private drive Mary caught a fleeting glimpse of someone—a tall figure which seemed to spring aside and out of her range of vision. So quick it happened that she was not sure she had seen anything at all.

Yet a mere possibility sent the blood pounding in her throat. If someone were in the boathouse she knew whom that someone was. The death notice which had awakened her and sent her down to the library of her uncle's house early one morning in the dim light of the

Mystery Place ? Indeed

Cosmo Snedden motored up from the city one day with a jubilant crowd and remained with them all night up the storm King road. It promised to be a lively party, but Mary declined in. Hip flasks and jazz offered no attractions for her.

She arose early next morning and was vexed to find her cousin already up and much better natured than usually she was after dancing and drinking the night away.

"You missed the time of your life, darling," Iris told her.

"That's what you always say."

"Oh, we were all lit. I'm going to get mother to stay another week. Haven't had so much fun in ages."

"She's seen him." Mary said to herself and waited all day for a confidence.

However, she got up next morning to find the household was astir. Very early she had heard the rustle in Iris' room, now saw the tall girl in a red bathrobe and cape picking a way down to the beach. And between the trees she caught sight of someone who waited, one whose head made a splash of color in the dimness.

They were standing together, Iris and Danny Mullins, ready for a plunge, when she came up behind. They turned at her hail and an expression of fury went over the girl's face. The man, however, flashed his white grin, greeting the intruder with a frankness that doused her anger and left her more puzzled than she had been before.

"Hello, kid. What d' you know?"

"I didn't suppose you'd care for swimming," she answered, primly.

With an impatient shrug Iris had jumped off the spring-board and was swimming out, leaving the two alone. Mary whirled about and spoke in a husky, resentful tone.

"Why are you here? Did you come on her account?" She nodded toward the lake. "You promised me something—"

He stepped toward her and his face was tense as her own. "Y' got me wrong, kid. I didn't know this layout was your uncle's."

Something of fear touched his eyes, but Mary did not miss the jerking way they turned toward the girl in the water.

"Are you going to keep your promise, Danny? Tell her who you are?"

She held him with a look of challenge that grew a bit mocking as he did not answer. "I thought you were not afraid—"

"I'll tell her," he said and moved away. There was a quick flexility in that gesture and Mary guessed, rightly enough, that he hated her just then.

"A fine deal" he muttered. Always making trouble, there fluffs it's gimme this and gimme that and none of them let you alone. One wants a diamond and another wants a bombshell and around tipping his hand. All alike—"

It was the little brown one who disrupted his peace. He knew that now.

As they were parting this morning Iris had dated him for a tramp in the woods and Mary Smith had scowled with her big eyes telling him something. He had said he would go, but now when he knew what it was all about, he had sense enough to forget it.

The Spook walked out to the garage where he found a sunny corner and sat down to read.

His reading was interrupted by a cheerful cry. "There he is Mimi! Did you forget our date?"

The Spook started up, looking in to the laughing face of Iris Ring. She stood with her head tipped one side, regarding him gaultishly. And behind her, grave and uncomfortable, was Mary Smith.

"What do you think of him, Mimi?" Iris called. "Looks like a three-alarm fire to me. Anyone

WINS HARVARD SCHOLARSHIP

William J. Killion of Dorchester, graduate of Boston College in the class of 1926, was awarded the Herbert W. Parker scholarship at the Harvard Law school. It was announced Sunday.

He received the second highest average in the first year law class at Harvard in an examination on all the matter that the students had from September until December, when the test was held.

Last of Famed Bandit Gang Slain 'In His Boots'

West Palm Beach, Jan. 30 (AP)—When Haywood Register fell mortally wounded under a leaden hail from an ambuscade of officers, Sheriff "Bob" Baker finished a job he undertook four days ago when he set out to exterminate the notorious Ashley gang.

Register died with his boots on in best approved outlaw fashion, with his guns blazing defiance at the officers who attempted to return him to the State penitentiary and a life sentence for murder.

The last member of the gang of desperadoes, who from their hidden retreats deep in the swamps of the Everglades preyed for years on the villages along the Florida East Coast, escaped last December 3 from the State penitentiary at Raiford, where he had been serving concurrent life sentences for murder and robbery.

Police Provide 'Play Street' for New York 'Grownups'

New York, Jan. 30 (AP)—A "play street" for grownups was opened in the congested garment section today.

The outpouring each noon of the thousands of workers employed by the garment houses has long been a police problem, sidewalks and streets between the hours of noon and 1 p. m. becoming virtually impassable.

Police Commissioner Whalen has now solved the problem by ordering that 36th st., between Seventh and Eighth aves., be closed to traffic during the hour.

Prince "Feels Like Death" on His Mine Tour

MOVED BY SCENES OF POVERTY

Newcastle, Eng., Jan. 30 (AP)—The Prince of Wales was heartily cheered by a big crowd when he starred from his hotel this morning for a visit to the North umberland coal fields, which are reputed to contain some of the blackest spots in the country.

The Prince was deeply moved by some of the appalling conditions he saw yesterday and refused to leave the distribution depots until he was thoroughly satisfied that everything possible was being done to help the distressed people.

The Prince sometimes has had difficulty in finding words to express his sympathy in his tour.

The fact that everywhere it was apparent that the suffering and generally known belief does and that the present distress was due to a loss of work touched the Prince.

This was illustrated by an incident at Winlaton where he was visiting the cottage of a miner who had been without work for three years. The Prince seemed awestruck by the bareness of the rooms and evidences of extreme poverty. "You must find it very difficult to live," he said to the miner's wife. She deserted the room afterward, and

"He didn't seem able to say much. He just looked around and his voice sounded broken like."

PRINCE IN DANGER.

The Daily Express said today the Prince was risking his best health on his tour, since he is suffering from a heavy cold and confessed to a friend, who assumed a long face early morning, that he "felt like death."

At Peiton Lane, Robert Smith, 81, smoked the Prince on the back and said, "How are you old man?"

The Prince readily replied: "I'm all right, how are you my boy?" and he returned the smack.

Mrs. Clapp of Newfield gravely entered into the details of the week by washday and showed the heir to the throne various mending garments she had been washing and ironing. Another woman dilated on the virtues of her pig.

At another village the future king visited Martin McCann, a widower in whose family of eight only a lad of 15 is working. The prince met the lad who was just returning from a mine his broken shoes revealing his mud-covered feet.

"We haven't been able to buy clothes for years," replied the youth.

Races, by Plane, to Dying Dad's Side

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 30 (NEA)—Vaughn Pierce, the son of Ralph Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., started an air race with death shortly before dawn today to reach his father's bedside. Pierce, with his mother and sister, Mary, took off early this morning in a Curtiss Robin monoplane with Van O'Brien as pilot. Soon after the northward trip was started, young Pierce changed to a faster plane at Palm Beach, and is expected to reach Buffalo in 18 hours.

MINISTER OFFERS CONGRATULATIONS

JAIL AND FINE IN LIQUOR CASE

Newton police were prosecutors and not defendants today in Newton Court, but they had their tense moments along with Frank Bartezak of Concord st., who eventually was fined $150 and sentenced to six months for alleged keeping and exposing of liquor.

When Sergt. Nicholas Veducci testified that he and other officers opened a drain trap and siphoned out liquor, Atty. Joseph F. O'Connell, counsel for Bartezak, asked the officer what right he had to break a Newton city ordinance by tampering with plumbing when he was not a licensed plumber.

Then the attorney, following an answer to another question by the sergeant, asked why the sergeant violated a state law by placing other than milk in a milk bottle.

All the questions along this line availed little, however, and Bartezak finally appealed the fine and sentence and was held in $800 for Superior Court.

Plan Ball Friday to Aid Rev. T. A. Ryan

Various Catholic organizations in Boston were today completing co-operative plans for a dance to be held at the Ritz Hotel Friday night for the benefit of the Rev. Thomas A. Ryan, formerly of Boston, now pastor of St. Mary's church, Lampasas, Tex.

J. A. Carr

James A. Carr, chairman of the dance committee declared today early ticket sales indicated a record crowd. Music is to be furnished by Morey Pearl's orchestra.

The general committee is headed by William V. Doherty. Robert V. Lee is chairman of the entertainment committee; Edward G. Madden, chairman of the invitation committee; Paul J. Carolan, chairman of the ticket committee; John J. Reardon, chairman of the reception committee; Reginald Halstrom, chairman of the checking committee, and Eugene J. Sullivan, chairman of refreshments.

STEAL CHEESE, TRUCK AND ALL

A truckload of cheese, truck and all, was stolen early today from the factory of the Fellsway Cheese Co., Somerville, the firm reported to the police.

The thieves forced the factory door and drove the machine away with its contents. They also took 200 pounds of cheese which were in the factory storeroom. The truck was valued by the company at $10-0, the original load of cheese at $300, and the cheese from the storeroom at $55. The truck was painted with the name of the Fellsway Cheese Co.

Flier Dies in Crash

Junction City, Kan., Jan. 30—Pvt. Sydney Blackwood, Cabot, Ark., was killed and Lieut. Percy Wright was injured seriously when an army airplane piloted by Wright crashed at the edge of Marshall Field, Ft. Reilly. The plane was returning to the field after a short trip.

TAKES WEEK TO NAME BABY

Paris, Jan. 30 (INS)—Elaborate Hindoo ritual christening ceremonies lasting a week are under way at Chateau Holkar, at St. Germain, today, for the tiny, four-day old "Princess of Indore," who was born to Nancy Ann Miller, American wife of the former Maharajah of Indore.

The name of the infant, "Shanta Rupe Holkar," was officially traced.

"Purified water," brought from the Ganges River in India, is using needed for "sacred baths" of the little princess.

There are nearly a score of separate rites before the entire ceremony is completed.

Seven-Year Term for Assault Is Opposed

Edward C. R. Bigler, deputy commissioner of correction, today opposed a petition filed by Samuel W. Mendum of Woburn asking that a minimum penalty of seven years be provided for assault and robbery while armed with intent to kill or maim. Speaking before the legislative committee on judiciary, Bagley said that if a minimum sentence is to be provided it should be in excess of seven years.

Gov. Allen Makes 3 Hit-Run Awards

Governor Allen today presented $25 checks to William D. Sawyer of Jamaica Plain and Benjamin L. Walker of South Boston for furnishing information on hit and-run drivers.

A third check for the same amount was turned over to Councilor Mark Duff of New Bedford to be presented to John F. Doyle of Fall River.

Plan New School at Newton Center

A step will soon be taken to construct a junior high school Newton Center for the students of the south side of Newton. At next meeting of the Board of Aldermen the school committee will recommend that plans be made for the building of such a structure on land now owned by the city.

There are two junior high schools in Newton at present, one in West Newton and the other in Newton.

Coasting Victim Worse

William Wilkinson, 10-year-old victim of a coasting accident on North Shore rd., Revere, was in a dangerous condition today at the Chelsea Memorial Hospital. He was believed to have a fractured skull.

Using Alcohol as an Anesthetic

Mexico City, Jan. 30 (AP)—Alcohol, applied by an intravenous injection, has been successfully used as an anesthetic by Dr. Miguel Lerdo. The doctor removed a kidney without the patient showing the least pain during an operation which lasted more than an hour.

Medical authorities said alcohol stimulated the heart and diagnosed upon the use of liquor as diabetic were removed by Lerdo refused to sell his formula, he said he would place his discovery at the disposal of the medical fraternity for the benefit of mankind.

STORK IS WINNER IN RACE

A young mother was resting comfortably today after losing a race with the stork from her home in Somerville to the New England Hospital for Women and Children in Dimock st., Roxbury.

The stork, flying a bit ahead of schedule, overtook the young woman, Mrs. Phillip Brady, 24, of 59 Alpine st., Somerville, as she hurried to the hospital.

Mrs. Brady was taken faint in front of 334 Columbus ave. and was assisted into Keefe's Hotel Dr. James H. Thornton, of 536 Commonwealth ave., was summoned and attended her as a baby girl was born.

Miss Mary Anderson, a nurse at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, chanced to be passing the hotel as Mrs. Brady was being assisted in, and she also attended her.

Following the birth, an ambulance was summoned and Mrs. Brady was taken to the New England Hospital. It was reported there today that both mother and infant are doing fine.

MYSTERY IN DETECTIVE SLAYING

Willimantic, Ct., Jan. 30—On the theory that County Detective William E. Jackson 55, was killed by some embittered member of the "Diamond brothers' gang or a friend of the "ice box bandits" of Worcester, police today began a roundup of these bandits' known associates.

The Diamond brothers, Brooklyn gangsters, were executed at Sing Sing more than a year ago for murder in connection with one of several holdups.

The "ice box bandits" as their appendage implies locked their victims of store holdups in the store refrigerators. The youths are now serving life terms in the Connecticut State Prison at Wethersfield.

Detective Jackson was shot down in his home when he answered a knock at the side door. His body, with a bullet hole in the cheek was found on the kitchen floor by his wife and daughter Juanita, when they returned from a shopping trip.

Jackson was principal witness in the case of the "ice box bandits" and he did most of the tracking that resulted in arrest of the accused brothers.

In the past few weeks he had been working on the case of Thomas Mazzola, who is now in jail in Brooklyn, Ct., charged with the murder of his mother-in-law.

The brother in law of Mazzola was questioned immediately after the slaying but was released.

A brother detective Officer Hurley of Willimantic, who had been with Jackson when he was overcome when he learned of the latter's death

MASTER SMUGGLERS REAP GIGANTIC PROFITS

Here are the plain, appalling facts:

The United States today ranks second only to China and India as the world's largest per capita user of deadly narcotics.

The nations of the Old World which profit enormously through the drug traffic are using this country as in the past they used China, a rich and insatiable market for their surplus opium—a market among whose millions of people is an ever-growing number of addicts willing to pay high for doom.

$50,000,000 Just Part Of Smugglers' Profit

In the six months just concluded, contraband drugs valued from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 are known to have been smuggled into the United States. This is the testimony of United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle. The known contraband, colossal as it is, is but a fraction of the prohibited narcotics in transit.

This huge, illicit cargo of poison has but one destination, the addict; ready-made or to-be-made; and but one fruit, crime.

Ten years ago the narcotics evil was so alarming that a special committee of investigation was appointed by the U. S. secretary of the treasury.

An extract from its report says:

"The committee is of the opinion that the total number of addicts probably exceeds 1,000,000 at the present time. . . . The range of ages of addicts was reported as from 12 to 75 years. The large majority of addicts of all ages was reported as using morphine or opium or its preparations. . . . Most of the heroin addicts are comparatively young, a portion of them being boys and girls under the age of 20. This is also true of cocaine addicts."

Heroin Most Deadly In Effect on Youths

Mark the last two sentences: "Heroin addicts are young—under 20. True, also, of cocaine addicts."

Heroin is the most vicious of the opium derivatives—the one that appeals to the reckless spirit of youth. Try anything once! And it is the most inexorable in the swiftness of its habit formation. In three months of even fitful indulgence, the habit is fatally fixed; the boy or girl who takes the first shot for the thrill of it is definitely finished.

A survey of the addicts in prison bears eloquent testimony to the treasury report. The women addicts are often pitifully young. Often they are educated. They are sometimes even brilliant. No class is immune from a habit that can be so readily formed, nor from a traffic that is the easiest and most profitable illicit business in the world. Diamonds selling at the price of pebbles would have no readier market than "dope," wherever, however and whenever it is peddled.

Rapid Increase Noted In Number of Addicts

In the ten years since the treasury committee made its report, conditions have steadily grown worse. The number of addicts committed to penal institutions and sanitariums has increased from approximately 6 or 7 per cent in 1919 to 60 per cent of criminals incarcerated in 1927. And 200,000 recorded addicts in New York City alone.

These are the findings for the year 1927 by the New York Department of Corrections in a study of the drug traffic throughout America.

"The foregoing but confirms the statements of witnesses," says Stephen C. Porter, father of the narcotic farm bill, in his report to the House of Representatives, "that much of the crime committed is traceable to addicts in their frenzy to obtain money with which to buy drugs. Young boys and girls are seduced from good citizenship. Even a child born to an addict mother becomes addicted through the mother's milk."

How does this concern you? Can you dismiss it as a problem of the underworld?

Craving Drives Addicts To Insane Violence

When the nation harbors more than a million addicts, each one, no matter how cultivated, a potential criminal—not because morphine or even heroin directly incite to violence, but because the addict, deprived of his supply, becomes a maniac in his efforts to secure the opiate. He will rob. He will commit arson or murder. Nothing exists but his insane craving and the torturing need to stop it.

This army of diseased people, physically and mentally unfit for economic use, represent a financial loss to the country estimated between $200,000,000 and $3,000,000,000 annually.

Its number is growing by leaps and bounds. The habit is more easily formed than any other vice; its effect is more inexorable and vicious; its doom is final. Once an addict—always an addict. For 98 per cent.

And the fields and factories of Asia and Europe continue blandly and doggedly catering to this deadly appetite. They continue dumping their surplus on apathetic, trusting America.

In 1729 the emperor of China made a valiant plea to his people to stem the cultivation of opium. He found an indifferent response. There, too, the majority felt secure.

Big Interests Behind Traffic With Millions

It is this fact that makes the drug traffic a menace—a deadly menace to young, idealistic America. There are incredible millions in "dope." There are big interests behind it—whole nations interested in keeping up and expanding the traffic.

Even a cursory glance at the meetings of the League of Nations opium conference brings home this disgraceful fact . . . humanity's no chance against money. Degradation to millions if they want it, but revenue for the opium growers and the cocaine manufacturers. The nations gaining wealth from opium industry are openly resolved to protect and maintain the traffic. If America wants these narcotics they will see that America, despite her embargo, gets them.

The United States has one of the most rigid and smuggling-tight systems of narcotic control in the world. It is equaled only by the protection Great Britain gives to her own subjects.

The Federal Narcotic Control Board, composed of Secretary of State Kellogg, Secretary of Treasury Mellon and former Secretary of Commerce Hoover, decide each year how much raw opium and how much coca leaves are required for strictly medicinal and scientific uses. There are but four factories making opium derivatives for these legitimate uses in the United States. And every ounce of their production is strictly accounted.

Smugglers Find Way To Evade U. S. Control

The leaks are neglible.

Yet the entire country is flooded from coast to coast with smuggled drugs. They pour in like water through a sieve.

How and why?

Because we have 40,307 miles of coast and only some 300 internal revenue officers to guard it.

And because opium can be smuggled in intricate and almost undetectable ways . . . $2000 worth can be secreted in a hollow walking stick, $20,000 in a small suitcase, and millions in a trunk. It is obviously impossible to open every bag, break every cane and umbrella and tear to pieces each ship which enters our ports.

The subtest intellects in the world are bent on outwitting us. And the interested nations keep up a huge surplus.

They will not cut down production of opium and coca leaves.

Demands Far Exceed World's Legal Needs

At the last league opium conference, the health committee of the League of Nations and the opium advisory committee estimated the MAXIMUM need of the entire world for medicinal and scientific purposes could not exceed—

The total production of opium is admitted by those most interested in suppressing the facts to be between 8000 and 15,000 tons, while Java alone produced more coca leaves in 1922 than would give the required 12 tons of cocaine.

So this vast surplus must bring revenue to the interested countries.

To create a market for just a surplus, China by the infamous Tientsin treaty of 1858 was compelled to admit free the Indian opium crop.

America can not be bullied into self pollution as China was. But she is being duped into it. Compared to the narcotics traffic, prohibition is a shining success. We become excited over bootleg whisky and calmly ignore bootleg "dope."

As well might a mother go on a rampage against apple pie for her children, yet sit placidly while a neighbor feeds the youngsters arsenic.

But wait—glance at the ways taken to outwit the government in the year just past, at the titanic profits of the master smugglers, at the grewsome results in our criminal annals.

CRIME THE FRUIT OF GREAT TRAFFIC IN 'DOPE'

Boys, Girls Stagger to School Drunk; Woman Arrested

Camden, N. J., Jan. 30 (AP)—A woman grocer, accused of selling whiskey to South Camden grammar school pupils, was arrested today when federal agents raided her place of business. She gave her name as Mrs. Mary Mandolitch.

School teachers at the Charles Sumner school complained to federal agents that two 12-year old boys had purchased a pint of liquor at the Mandolitch store last Friday and that when they arrived at school they were so intoxicated they could barely reach their desks, where they collapsed.

AFGHAN RESCUE PLANE MISSING

New Delhi, India, Jan. 30 (AP)—A British Royal Air Force troop carrying plane with five men engaged in rescuing foreigners from Afghanistan was missing today in the wild hill country north of the Khyber Pass.

A Handley-Page airplane which started with the big troop plane landed safely at the Kabul Airdrome, but was held up for lack of sparkplugs. Two more machines were due to start for Kabul today but were held up because of bad weather.

"FLU"
Some Sensible Advice

1. Avoid crowds.
2. Avoid chilling.
3. Avoid fatigue.
4. Avoid anyone who is sneezing or coughing.
5. Take plenty of fluids.
6. Take plenty of nourishment.
7. Keep nasal passages clean.
8. Keep the bowels open.
9. If you catch cold do something about it at once! Remember, "Flu" usually develops from a cold. At the first sneeze, chill or headache, take Hill's Cascara-Quinine.

Hill's stops a cold in one day because it does the four necessary things in one:

1. Checks the cold germs.
2. Allays the fever.
3. Opens the bowels.
4. Tones the system.

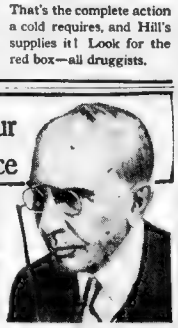
Cascara is Your Doctor's Choice



Your first Cascaret will demonstrate how THOROUGH this gentle laxative is, after all. Your next surprise will be the length of time before you need another. Eventually you'll see that cascarizing tends to make the bowels move thereafter of their own accord!

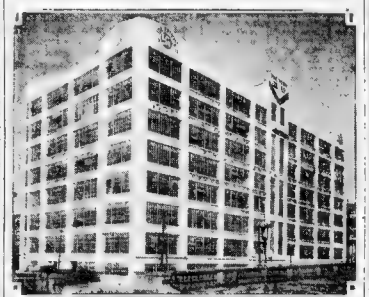
A modern drug store must stock many laxatives, but for your own good the druggist would rather have you ask for the inexpensive little box of Cascarets than anything else.

CASCARETS
They Work While You Sleep!

FLU victims rarely escape

a slight diarrhoea following the acute stages of the disease. To correct this doctors prescribe plenty of hot milk. Many patients object to the taste of hot milk plain. But everybody likes Vanilla-Milk, fixed by simply adding a few drops of Burnett's Vanilla and a little sugar to the glass of milk, warm or cold. Safe to give children as well as grownups, for Burnett's Vanilla is absolutely pure.

HOWARD CLOTHES PLANT



NEW BROOKLYN, N. Y., FACTORY OPENED

Ice Water Kills Youth

Chicago, Jan. 30 (INS)—Robert Lee Cook, 19, was dead today as a result of drinking a glass of ice water while overheated from a football game. The youth collapsed at once.

ADD TO HOWARD CLOTHES CHAIN

Commenting today upon the erection of the new Howard Clothes Inc. factory at Brooklyn, N. Y. Maurice Lowenstein, general manager of the Howard Clothes store in Boston, declared that the factory's establishment marks a renewal of the growth of the corporation.

Within five years, the Howard Clothes chain has developed itself from its first single store to its present group of 14 shops.

"The Howard Clothes stores were founded upon the fair-bound principles of sincere and courteous service, backed up by 100 per cent reliability," said Lowenstein.

"Now, with the opening of our new, modern, sun-lit factory, we hope to render greater and greater values, as our one standardized price is $22.50."

SHARKEY LEAVES TONIGHT FOR MIAMI GO

Jack Conway Off for Miami With Sharkey

JACK CONWAY, boxing editor of the Boston Evening American, will accompany Jack Sharkey when the Boston heavyweight contender leaves for Miami, Fla., tonight to prepare for his 10-round battle with William L. (Young) Stribling on February 27.

The Sharkey-Stribling bout is one of the most important heavyweight bouts arranged in recent years. With Miami as a setting, it will be witnessed by the wealth of the world.

Jack Conway

Conway knows Sharkey, Stribling and Dempsey intimately. He will have the "inside" stories on the Florida battle, and also on Dempsey's future plans. Jack will take Boston Evening American readers behind the scenes and give them the low-down on the happenings at Miami.

Mr. Boston will also accompany the Sharkey party to Miami and will tell in his own immitable way of the training and fight itself.

If you want the best stories on the big fight, trail along with Jack Conway and Mr. Boston in the Boston Evening American.

Canadian Olympic Stars in Hub

CANADIAN IDOLS HERE FOR B. A. A. MEET

WORK OUT AT B.A.A. GYM

Williams Confident He'll Make Good Showing in Maj. Briggs Dash

By JOE CASHMAN

Percy Williams and Jimmy Ball, Canada's Olympic heroes, arrived in Boston today to complete training for their participation in the 40th annual Boston Athletic Association track and field carnival which will be held at the Arena on Saturday night.

The Maple Leaf fliers, both of whom are confident of making a successful New England debut, will place themselves in the able hands of Jack Ryder, veteran B. A. A and Boston College track coach, and the mentor will have both out on the Eagles' board track at University Heights, tomorrow afternoon if the weather grows a mite warmer.

Williams, the more famous of the pair and the only double winner at Amsterdam, will compete in the Major Briggs invitation 40-yard dash.

The young British Columbia schoolboy proved himself the world's greatest sprinter by winning both the 100 and 200-metres dashes at the Olympics, but he has not much experience in 40-yard sprints over the boards.

WILLIAMS CONFIDENT

Still, he is confident that he will make a creditable showing. The fact that he is a fast starter will be a great help to him. The start is about the only thing that counts in a 40-yard test and if the Canadian gets away as quickly as expected he stands a good chance of finishing in front.

He will be opposed by such experienced short indoor sprinters as Jimmy Daley of Holy Cross, Karl Wildermuth of Georgetown, Chet Bowman of the New York A. C. and Ernie Morrill, New England champion, to mention only a few of the stars entered in the event.

Ball is to compete in the 600-yard run. He is already assured of plenty of competition, for among his opponents will be Hernie McCafferty, Holy Cross sensation, who has yet to lose a race this season.

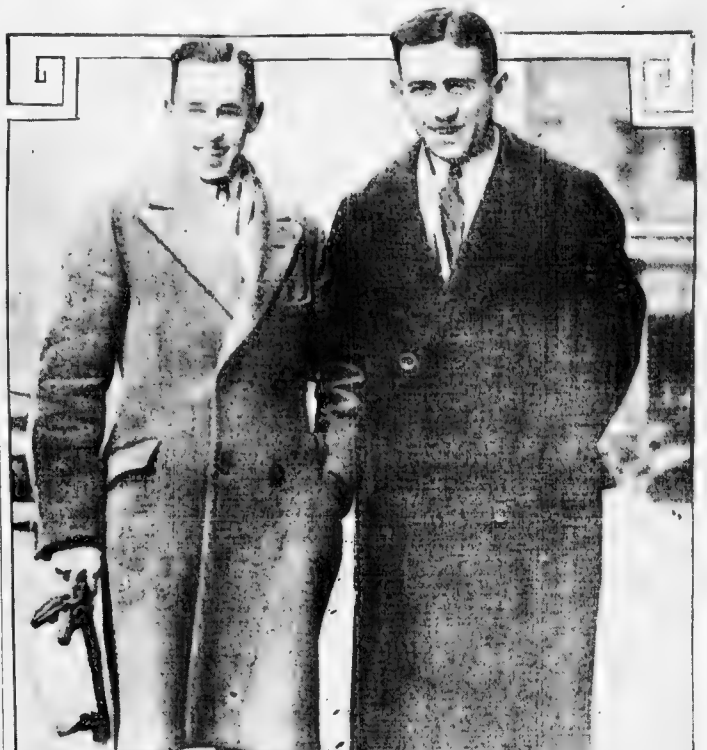
WANTS TO RACE BARBUTI

Ball, however, will not be entirely satisfied unless Ray Barbuti of the New York A. C. agrees to compete in the same event. Despite the fact that the former Syracuse star beat him by inches in the 400 meter race at Amsterdam, to score the only American track victory, the Canadian feels that he is the better man and he wants to prove it to the satisfaction of Boston fans.

He would rather finish away behind in the race, but in front of Barbuti, than he would to win the event with the Wingfoot star missing from the list.

Barbuti is entered in the meet as a member of the New York A. C. relay team, which will race the B. A. A. quartet. He hasn't decided as yet whether he will also compete in the 600, but the Unicorn committee is working overtime to persuade him to run and succeed.

The relay program is about the best that the club has ever arranged, and many real battles are assured when such natural rivals as Boston College and Holy Cross meet.



DOMINION'S STARS IN AMERICAN DEBUT

Percy Williams, left, and Jimmy Ball, who arrived in Boston today for the B. A. A. games at the Arena on Saturday night. Williams, winner of both the 100 and 200-meter sprints at the last Olympics, will run in the Major Briggs' 40-yard dash. O'KELLY IS HERE FOR GO WITH MALONEY

A red headed quant, only 21 years old, with a crushing right-hand punch, which may upset the entire heavyweight pot, will be the magnet which will attract hundreds of frantic railbirds to Jim Toland's gym today.

For Con O'Kelly, the Irish hope in this heavyweight tangle to select a successor to Gene Tunney as heavyweight champion of the world, is in our midst for the sole purpose of crushing the rust accumulated on "Dynamite Jim" Maloney of South Boston, and he steps through his first public training session in preparation for this bout in this city today.

O'Kelly worked out at 2 o'clock today, and judging by the popularity of this invading heavyweight, who has yet to meet his first defeat since coming here, Toland's gym will be packed to the rafters. Not only has the 10 years has a fighter invaded the Hub with such an appeal to the fans as this giant Celt. Everybody regards him as a dangerous thing marvel, who'll upset the dope more often if given a chance.

Jerry Kelly, Irish that O'Kelly is the greatest hunter produced in many years in Ireland. Shortly before coming to these parts, O'Kelly took the measure of Joe Sekyra, designated by the British board of boxing control as the leading contender for Phil Scott's crown. And when Scott later refused to meet him, O'Kelly was forced to come to this country, for British heavyweights refused to meet him.

O'Kelly admits that he was disappointed when he was held to a draw by Maloney, but he expects to win decisively this time. In his last start, he knocked out George Genias of Philadelphia in three rounds.

PLAN 6 BOUTS TO DECIDE A NEW CHAMP

New York, Jan 30 (AP)—The opening of Pauline Uccuiun for a bout on February 22 with K. O Christner in Madison Square Garden has revealed plans for six heavyweight elimination battles during the coming year. The winner under the present schedule, will come in September with Jack Dempsey in his old role of gladiator.

The Garden's idea, as outlined by Col. John S Hammond, acting general manager of the corporation, is this:

Paulino-Christner, February 22; winner to meet Tom Heeney.

Max Schmeling-Johnny Risko, February 1; winner to meet survivor of Heeney and Paulino or Christner battle.

Survivor of these matches to clash with the winner of the Jack Sharkey-Young Stribling bout in Miami Beach, February 27.

Now all the Garden has to do is to make arrangements for this ambitious program.

'Strangler' Wins in Comeback Bout

Lewis pinned the big fellow in straight falls, the first in 1 16 22 and the second in 0 7 29. Lewis used his famous headlock and various accessory holds to accomplish both falls.

Uhle Trying to Regain Old Form

Los Angeles, Jan 30 (AP)—George Uhle, veteran American League pitcher who recently was sold by the Cleveland Indians to the Detroit Tigers, is to come here shortly to have his right arm treated by Dr. Charles Sperry of Los Angeles in an effort to regain his old-time twirling form.

Epidemic Forces Court Games Shift

Gardner, Jan 30- Because of the smallpox epidemic, the Gardner-Greenfield high basketball game, which was to have been played at Greenfield, has been shifted to Gardner on March 5, the state originally scheduled for Gardner's appearance in Greenfield Worcester South has cancelled its game with Gardner for Friday night because of the epidemic.

Player-for-Umpire Trade Is Planned

Los Angeles, Jan. 30 (INS)— When it comes to "Starting things in baseball the Pacific Coast League is in a class by itself.

It was the leader in bouncing out ball players for mixing up with the Lawblers; it was in this circuit that the high prices for minor league ball players began, and it was the first league in organized baseball that had two presidents on its payroll at the same time.

Now comes Harry Williams with another idea that may establish a precedent. He plans on trading one of his present umpires to the Western League for Forest Cady, former Boston Red Sox catcher and more recently with Sacramento.

Terris-Herman Purses Held Up

New York, Jan. 30 (INS)—Pending investigation of a reported betting coup, the New York State Athletic Commission is holding up the purses of the principals in the Sid Terris-Babe Herman bout here Monday night.

Terris, a 10 to 1 favorite, was knocked out in the sixth round a few minutes after he had floored the Sacramento, Cal., battler for a count of nine. Previously the referee had ordered both boxers to "quit stalling and fight."

Boxer Banned for Using Rabbit Punch

Milwaukee, Jan. 30 (AP)—Phil Zwick, Cleveland boxer, and Sammy Shack of New York, who defeated him in a bout here Monday night, have been suspended by the Wisconsin State Athletic Commission—Zwick indefinitely and Shack for 60 days.

The suspension of Zwick will be effective, the commission announced, "until he appears before the commission for an explanation relative to the use of the kidney and rabbit punches during his contest with Shack." The ban on Shack was due to his being overweight and to his "poor showing against Zwick."

Hub School Sextets Offered Garden Rink

Fred J. O'Brien, associate director of athletic education in Boston schools, today received by mail from Sheldon H. Fairbanks, general manager of the Boston Garden, an invitation for the Boston high school teams to play in the Garden rink on Thursday night those games which, scheduled for Friday in the Arena, will have to be postponed because of the work entailed in preparing the Arena for the track meet next Saturday night.

Mr. Fairbanks offered the Garden gratis and explained that he was interested mainly in enabling the schools to keep to their schedule and in helping them out of their difficulty, providing no other remedy is in sight.

U. of Penn Athletes Limited to Two Sports

Philadelphia, Jan 30 (AP) Athletic authorities at the University of Pennsylvania today announced new departure regarding control of undergraduates in sport competition. Hereafter freshmen will be limited to participation in one sport, except in rare instances, and upper classmen will be held to two forms of competition, except in regular cases.

The new policy will be put into effect February 11.

Penn coaches believe the average varsity man who is active athletically throughout the year has difficulty in keeping up with his studies and taxes his strength too much. In future, if he desires to compete in three sports he must convince the coaches that his class work will not suffer thereby, nor will he be undertaking too great a physical burden. The same rules will be applied in limiting freshmen to one sport.

Cheverus Captain Out for Season

Portland, Me., Jan. 30— Philip Conley, center and captain of the Cheverus high basketball team of this city is out of the game for the rest of the year because of an attack of heart trouble, according to an announcement by Walter Mahtbill, coach.

Farrell Brothers Seek Golf Revenge

Sharkey is already in superb physical condition and will not need more than 16 days of strenuous training, for his meeting with Stribling. The first part of Sharkey's stay at Miami will be devoted to light exercises, golf and sight seeing.

Sharkey's presence in the Southern resort will stimulate interest in the ballyhoo in connection with the fight.

SHARKEY came through his strenuous tussle with K. O Christner unmarked. There was a slight soreness in his left thumb following the contest but that has gone away.

Jesse Palazola, one of Sharkey's backers, is already at Miami and will have Jack's training quarters in readiness when the Buckley entry arrives.

Jack Dempsey has notified Johnny Buckley that he has prepared the Miami Kennel Club as Sharkey's camp. The spot is centrally located and has ample seating capacity for those who may wish to see Jack in his training workouts.

THE Behan and Christner bouts for Sharkey up and he may be expected to flash one of his best battles when he steps into action against Stribling.

It is likely that the third man in the ring will be picked from a group of officials with national standing. All Sharkey asks is an honest battle. He feels he can lick Stribling, decisively, provided the referee in the ring is not hostile.

WITH Sharkey and Stribling through with warm-up matches, Dempsey reports a brisk demand for tickets. The $25 tickets, in particular, are in heavy demand.

I have found at big fights that the tickets near the ring always [illegible] regardless of how much they cost. The cheaper priced tickets also go quickly. The drag comes in the medium priced seats.

Dempsey and Bill Carey look for a gate of more than half a million dollars. Sharkey is rooting for a record house, although he is protected by a guarantee of $100,000 for a chance to prove he is the best drawing card in the boxing game, with the possible exception of Tunney.

Rice Takes Setups for Golf Games

By DAMON RUNYON

I HAVE before me reports from some of my trusted operatives in which serious charges are brought against a hitherto highly esteemed contemporary, and a most deplorable situation in the Manly Art of Teeing Off—or is it Up?—is laid bare.

My operatives assert that their investigations in connection with the noble game of golf disclose that the practice of picking pop-overs, or hit-outs, as they are termed in the Sout Science, has become quite common among the crack golfers of the land.

And that the most flagrant offender in this respect is none other than Mr. H Grantland Rice, the sports writer.

In fact, my operatives declare that Mr Rice is the Young Stribling of golf.

I make this charge public only after considerable hesitancy and full consideration. I feel that it is almost indicative for a sports writer to expose a brother-artist, but the statements contained in the reports of my operatives with reference to Mr. Rice lead me to the opinion that I would scarcely be serving my public did I maintain silence.

THESE reports are based largely on the recent tournament of the Artists' and Writers' Golf Association or club, or amalgamation, or whatever they call it, at Palm Beach, when the club championship, involving a trophy of great value, was won for the second time by Mr. Rice. Or maybe it was the third.

Mr. Rice is president of the Artists and Writers, a fact that is in itself significant, if not sinister.

And it is well known, my operatives states, that Mr. Rice is a hot golfer, who should be competing with such as Leo Diegel, William Melhorn, Robert Jones, Walter Hagen, Harry Cooper, and blokes like that.

"But I have evidence to prove," report Operative X-19, "that instead of remaining in his own class Subject, who is Mr. Rice, is inveigling golfing bezarks to go down South with him, and take part in fun after a few rounds or so of alleged competition.

"While Mr Stribling, who uses only one pelocks at a time, and then generally in some secluded spot where the dive will not make too great a splash, Mr. Rice has become so bold that he is taking carloads of tankers with him, and putting them on in as conspicuous a place as Palm Beach.

"In the last Artists' and Writers' tournament there, Mr. Rice shamelessly employed such notorious golfing croupes as Tube Goldberg, Claire Briggs, Rex Beach and a number of others who can scarcely hold their hands up in the same golfing competition with Mr Rice.

"It was so obvious that he was trying to carry a couple of the tar from to give them the semblance of real opponents for at least a round that many of the Palm Beach spectators walked off laughing under their breath. They did not bias audibly because Palm Beachers are saving up steam for some real hissing for Young Stribling and the Sharkey man at Miami next month but it was none the less hissing.

"The Palm Beach public resents Mr. Rice bringing his divers to that resort to practice his golf punches on them, and I am informed that he will not be permitted to appear there again unless it is with a real opponent, such as Leo Pheregallo Flynn or Mr. Ulrane Sinn or some other man who at least knows the difference between a niblick and a screw driver.

"I recall that when Mr. Rice won the tournament of the Artists and Writers last year the thought struck me that an elephant hunter was out shooting sparrows.

BUT I figured that perhaps Mr. Rice was only tuning up for a more important engagement. You know it is considered permissible for any top-notcher of the Sour Science to take Dan O Connell off somewhere and spread him, by way of getting the blood in circulation for a big shot.

I imagined it was the same in golf. Now that I think of it, I do remember seeing the name of Heywood Broun among the Artists and Writers talking the trip this year, and I also recollect thinking, vaguely, that Mr Rice was probably going to drop off at Cheraw, or Hemlet, with Mr. Broun and bat him around a bit, for Mr. Broun would assuredly be the Dan O Connell of golf.

But it never occurred to me that Mr. Rice might be making a serious play for the permanent racket of the Artists' and Writers' tournament. The reports of my operatives have shown me a great light.

I can now understand that what I construed as a burst of hospitality on his part when he invited me to go golfing with him one day last summer was but a sinister effort on his part to build up another golfing stumblebum for himself.

I have no doubt now that I would eventually have found myself landed into a Pullman alone, with such roughnecks as Ring Lardner, the Francisco Cruz of the fairways, Walter Trumbull, Herbert Bayard Swope, William J. Maxwell, Colonel Bozeman Bulger, Warren Brown, Jeff Machamer Sam Fellon, Hurry-up York, Sammy P Hall, Rene Jack McCaffery, Joe Bannon, Bill Corum and a score of others.

I never thought to mix up conie upon Mr. Rice taking candy from infants. There isn't a good put to the outfit I have never committed golf in my life, but I can see where a bloke might go a long ways at it by just using Mr. Rice's list.

AMERICAN CUP FINAL CONTEST IN NEW YORK

By BILL McALLEY

The deciding game in the final of the American cup play, between the New Bedford Whalers and the New York Nationals, will be played at Hawthorne Park Brooklyn, on Sunday.

The club met and decided on the pitch of the Wanderers as the best neutral ground from a financial angle.

As both of the clubs could play on either team's ground pending it was satisfactory to both but failure this they must play on a neutral.

Except this could not come to an agreement to play on Battery Park or the Polo grounds

FANS DISAPPOINTED

New England soccer fans are disappointed at the decision, for it was said that the game would be played on either the Fall River or Providence pitch, which would give an opportunity of witnessing the contest at very little cost.

Now, in order to see the greatest game of the season, fans will have to travel to Brooklyn.

Intense interest is centered in the battle which has the two most evenly matched clubs in the country fighting for possession of the Edgar Lewis trophy.

Last weekend the contestants battled in two games, one at New Bedford and one at the Polo Grounds, and at the end of hostilities, were deadlocked with four goals each.

ELEVENS UNCHANGED

The nine elevens will represent the teams in the coming battle and those fortunate to be there are sure to witness the bitterest struggle of the season.

The league schedule for this weekend has the Phillies at Boston and the Brooklyn Wanderers at Coats on Saturday. On the following day the Phillies will be at Providence and the Wanderers at Tiverton.

The Jersey City club is not scheduled for the weekend at the request of the management who have not at the present time the eleven which they now possess to put a match for the other club in the race.

With a week of grace they will attempt to secure a first class eleven. They signed Jimmy Douglass, Fall River utility wing forward, and Frank McKenna, who formerly played with Fall River, Coats and the Nationals.

All soccer fans will sympathize with the family of the late Patrick Dorey, popular local soccer referee, who met with a sudden death. Pat was held in high esteem by fans and players alike in this district and his loss is a severe blow

RIVALS WAR ON MAT AT GRAND

Joe Malcewicz and Joe Ball Konnar, bitter wrestling rivals, clash tomorrow night at the Grand Opera House in the feature finish match of Paul Bowser's weekly all-star wrestling show.

The great young Malcewicz will be a slight favorite to win For the past three years he has been one of the outstanding heavy weights in the world.

Only one man, Ed Strangler Lewis, has been able to pin his shoulders to the mat in two years, and today he is rated as the most threatening menace to Gus Sonnenberg, heavyweight champion.

Tomorrow night he will give away 40 pounds in weight and wreath the ropehost man in the game, but the 200-pound panther-man is confident that he will toss Konnar just as easily and fast as convincingly as he threw Allane and Hanson.

A brilliant preliminary card will precede the main bout. Bob McCoy of Canadien, who seems to be as great an idol as Gus Sonnenberg, will tackle Nick Gotch of New York in one of the preliminary bouts

Salem Man Defeats Fownes at Pinehurst

Pinehurst, N C., Jan 30—William C. Fownes Jr., of Piedmont failed to go out in better than 45 in the first round of the 25th annual St. Valentines tournament here and was beaten by R J. Breed of Salem, Mass.

Fownes had a siege of hitting under the ball, thereby losing so much distance that he let Breed get a 4 and 3 decision with no better than bogey golf

The best round of the day over the number 2 course was displayed by S. R. Hewitt Swoope of Philadelphia, who went out in 38 against G. F. Herdling of Orange, N. J., 7 up at the turn. Swoope won by 7 and 6.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

MR. BOSTON was doing an old-fashioned jig in the sports department when the gang breezed in today.

"Why all the merriment?" queried Myles McSweeney

"I'm dancing because I'm sad," replied the veteran as his eyes twinkled. "Jack Conway just called me on the telephone and told me to pack my bags.

"I've got my tooth brush in my pocket,' I told him. 'Where are we going'

"Miami, he chirped 'We're leaving with Jack Sharkey tonight.

"So I'm sad and dreary at the thoughts of leaving the cold winds of Boston for the sun-shine and warmth of Miami My heart will ache as I play golf and go swimming, while you birds dodge the snow flakes. Yeah! I said my heart will break, but somehow I'll manage to live down my sorrow.

"Of course if things get too dreary in Miami I might take a boat ride over to Havana to liven things up. They say that if you cannot find what you're looking for at Miami you won't be disappointed at Havana

"FUNNY thing how we're never satisfied. I like the idea of checking out for the South at this time of the year, but still I'm peeved because I'm going to miss the heavyweight jam between Jim Maloney and Con O'Kelly which will be staged at the Boston Garden on Friday night.

"Maloney is the darling of the Irish-American fight followers while O'Kelly is Irish through and through.

"Con recently made a hit when he gave Jack Gagnon a hard fight here. Later he held Maloney even in a shindig in New York. Now the rival scatters are each out to grab the honors. It should be a swell fight. I figure Shamus will have the edge.

"BASEBALL lost one of its finest characters in the untimely death of Jim Price, secretary of the Boston Red Sox. I knew Jim ever since he came to Boston as a Sox official He was a member of the Ban Johnson wing of the American League and always held a high position in the Bob Quinn organization

"The last days I made the trip to New Orleans with the Red Sox. At the time Jim Price was secretary of the club. He was tireless in his service to the Sox, while he always went out of his way to show some kindness to a visitor or newspaper man.

"At that time Jim was in ill-health and took treatment at one of the famous salt water baths in New Orleans. His health later became worse. He has had frequent and severe heart attacks during the past week

"Jim was always a loyal booter for Bob Quinn and felt that his boss would eventually give Boston fans a pennant winner It is to be regretted that a princely character like Jim Price was not blessed with better health Those who knew the Sox secretary benefited from their meetings with him. We mourn your passing, Jim

MR BOSTON paged an office boy

"Hop out to my home and pick up my golf clubs," piped the [illegible] "I don't suppose it is against the rules of the South Shore courses for me to get in a little early training

"I'm sorry, boja," said George Grimm as he reported he was sold out on his free list for the Maloney-O Kelly mill

"Yeah, that's how I feel," said Mr. Boston jokingly as he pulled a few golf balls out of his desk. "As Walter Hagen would say, 'Keep your head down and your eye on the ball'

"When you're down in Miami think of us poor boobs freezing to death," sighed Freddy Lane. Joe Cashman joined in the chorus

"Yeah I'll at least think of you," piped Mr Boston

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

Class always tells in the long run. It took the Bruins a long time to get started against the lowly Chicago Blackhawks but when they did hit their stride, they scored three goals in less than 90 seconds to break a 1 to 1 tie and win, 4 to 1

The scoring orgy occurred between the fourteenth and sixteenth minutes of the third period and kept the Rossmen's slate for the year clean. Since New Year's they have won ten and tied two games.

If they can beat or tie the Maple Leafs in Toronto, tomorrow night they will have completed a month's play without a reverse. Thats a remarkable record but not a great deal more than should be expected of such an aggregation as Manager Art Ross has at his disposal

The capacity crowd that turited out to see the game was more or less a testimonial to Dr Mi Cavanah, the Bruins' latest high-priced importation. The doctor played his usual fine game and scored one of the four goals. There are few better center ice men in the National League and Charlie Adams made a ten-strike when he bought his release from the Maple Leafs

Perk Galbraith, veteran left wing of the natives, came out of his scoring slump to cage the tally that broke the ice and put the Bruins in front Now that Gal brath has found the range, he should be well up among the leading scorers in short order, for few pack a better shot than the popular forward.

Galbraith's goal was successful only because of the power behind it. "Chuck" Gardiner blocked it but it was travelling so fast that it tore its way right through the goalie's pads and into the net

Luck was written all over the lone Chicago counter. Westwood had the disc back of the net, and in an attempt to break clear knocked it out. It hit March's stick and caromed into the strings without anybody on either side knowing how it happened.

A new official to Boston, in the person of Leo Heffernan, worked the game along with Dave Ritchie to show with the Bruins. He wasn't used enough to hit his stride and when he did get into the game he was usually in some position strange to him. He didn't compare, with any of the surviving players, so he had to be let out

Riding Mickey a Bit — What Chance Have Hubbies Now? — Drives Ball for Score

HUB SIX ONE GAME BACK OF TOP

Tigers Can Tie With Leading Indians by Win at Arena Tomorrow

Newark Bulldogs, the hard-fighting team piloted by Sprague Cleghorn, come to Boston tomorrow to meet the Tigers in an important Canadian-American League game.

Victory for Newark would put the Cleghorn forces definitely into the league race after an extensive tenantire of the cellar.

The Bulldogs, having been on a winning rampage of late, now are only a game behind the New Haven Eagles. The tightness of the Can-Am race is illustrated further by the fact that the forces of Sprague Cleghorn are only three games and a half away from the top.

STOPPED REDS

Their victory over Providence ended the Reds winning streak of six straight and compressed the league race still further.

Since they acquired Corbett Denneny two weeks ago, the Bulldogs have been going as well as any team in the league. He is brother of Cy Denneny of the Bruins and has played hockey for the Chicago Blackhawks, Toronto Maple Leafs and several clubs in the Western League.

Last year title to his contract raised ructions in the National League and he was finally awarded by ruling of President Frank Calder of the league.

Denneny will team on the Newark front line with Nick Wasnie and Leo Quenneville a fast and resourceful pair of wings.

HALDERSON ON POINT

Slim Halderson, the giant of the Can Am League will start on defense with Capt. Jack McVicar. Hill Cook is in reserve and Pelle Lamontagne in goal.

Providence second in the league race to Springfield will play to-night in Philadelphia.

Victory over the Reds would put them a point ahead of Springfield if the Quakers should beat Providence, however. Springfield still would be at the top and the Tigers could get into a tie at the top with the Indians by beating Newark.

TAYLOR NIGHT AT ARENA

It will be Bobby Taylor night at the Arena tomorrow and 300 members of the Dorchester A. A. and several hundred Brookline colowningmen of the Tiger right winger will attend, headed by the St. Ambrose fife and drum corps of 30 pieces.

Taylor is an honorary member of the Dorchester club.

Tigers had their final practice today. The team is in good condition except for Ludger Demarais and Clark Heyd, who will be held out of action again.

Manager Powers planned to use them, but the team went so well without them in the course of its 8-to1 victory over Springfield that he decided to continue their layoff until they are entirely recovered from injures.

B. C. Represented at Grid Trophy Banquet

Two representatives of the Boston College football team, together with coach Joseph McKenney, will be the guests of the Veteran Athletes Association of Philadelphia Saturday night at the annual dinner to the outstanding eastern football team, to be held this year at the Penn. Athletic Club, Philadelphia.

Capt. Warren McGuirk and Al Weston, tackle and quarterback of last year's team will represent the team.

Due to a deadlock in the selecting of a single team this year as the outstanding eleven, delegations from six colleges will be the guests of the association, Saturday night.

Trophies will be awarded to all six colleges, while the Jolley cup probably will remain out of circulation this year, because of the inability of the association to come to a final decision on one team.

The other five colleges that will be represented at the meeting are, New York University, Penn, Georgetown, Army and Carnegie Tech.

HUSKY RELAY TEAMS IN N. Y. MEET

Northeastern relay team will race Fordham, Manhattan and St. John in a quadrangular event at 69 Melrose games at Madison Square Garden a week from Saturday.

Capt. Al Morang, N. E. A. A. A. and Eastern Intercollegiate A. A. A. high jump champion, will compete in his specialty.

B. U. AND BROWN RACE AT B. A. A.

Boston University's mile relay team will be the mark again Brown at the B. A. A. games at the Arena Saturday night. The Pioneers looked good while defeating Colby at the Pratt Memorial Field last Saturday, but Brown has a much stronger quartet than the boys from Maine or is likely to offer stiffer opposition.

Coach Bates will rely on the same team that won this week. Capt. Norman Bicknell, Stuart Tarr, Ron ald Harmon and Norman Grove will carry the baton for the Pioneers.

Capt. Bicknell will not run in the dash at the Garden meet but will conserve his energies for the relay race. He has already qualified for the finals in the 40-yard dash at the K. C. meet and is said to be a sure third in the final heat but the judges ruled otherwise.

SPEEDY EAGLET

GUARINO PASQUANTONIO, B. C.

Guarino is a valuable member of Jack Ryder's frosh track squad at Boston College. He won his way into the finals at the K. of C. meet last Saturday. He runs in the B. A. A. dash next Saturday.

Eagle Frosh Runner Can Step With Best

By JOHN GILLOOLY

A most promising feature of the Boston College track season this winter, according to Coach Jack Ryder, is the sprinting of Guarino Pasquantonio, little Italian boy who prepared for B. C. at English high school.

Ryder was unaware of the fact that the youngster rooms as another Hussey until the Knights of Columbus games on Saturday night.

Jack learned, from the youngster's trial spins at the Height sancer, that he was going to be among the leaders some day, but never dreamed that Guarino would be there this winter.

Pasquantonio, however, showed an admirable quality in the Garden meet and it is this trait that Jack feels will bring him to the top before he has competed in many more sprints. The B. C. wonder displayed a spirit of persistency that startled Coach Ryder and practically every one interested in his progress.

He fought his way into a berth in the trials. Then he continued the battle in the semifinals. He won a chance in the final against such men as Jimmy Quinn, former H. C. runner, now with the N. Y. A. C. and Jim Daley and George Morin of Holy Cross.

IN FINAL HEAT

The field of six lined up for the medal sprint. Guarino was easily distinguished from the rest by his youth and size. It seemed that he would be left behind by the speedy bunch that he was facing.

But there was no light between the field and Pasquantonio at the finish of the 50-yard dash. He was bunched up with the leaders and it looked as though he had nosed Jimmy Quinn out for third place although he wasn't picked in the judges.

For a freshman in college the feat was considered remarkable. But that isn't the half of it. Steady as Pasquantonio has shown had participated in the B. C.-'32 Exeter dual meet in the afternoon at Exeter and was a double first place winner.

WON TWO RACES

He ran two trial against the prep school flashes, won both, and then walked off with the final. After a short rest he came back to win the 300-yard dash, and having taken a quick shower, started for Boston where he was to engage in the frosh games.

"I was greatly surprised," said Ryder as he watched the youngster performing at the freight. I felt that he had it in him but didn't know that he was quite ready to show against the best sprinters in the East."

Ryder now intends to keep him at the middle distance dashes and give him all the experience possible against the stars of the petition's sprinters. In this way he'll be a top-notcher when he's ready to do some varsity running next year.

Goody will run in the B. A. A. meet next Saturday night and may break into the medal places although the entries in the Unicorn dash are expected to be even better than those in the K. of C. meet. He'll also be sent to the Millrose games in New York next week as a result of his last display.

LAD HAS EXPERIENCE

Pasquantonio isn't new to the running game nor to the sprinting events. He broke into the limelight at English high school under Leo Daley, who had something to do with sending the youngster to his Alma Mater.

He was the best in the city in the intermediate dash when in his junior year and he was practically every sprint he ever ran in under the Blue and Blue and Blue of English. He was a regimental champion and has a chance to some of the schoolboy dash marks.

He has made a most excellent start and the eyes of Boston College track followers will follow him for the rest of the indoor season. It seems as though they have another sprinter of the heights to take the place of Frank Hussey.

MACK SPECIAL LEAVES FOR BOUT FEB. 23

The Eddie Mack Special to Miami for the heavyweight bout between Jack Stanley of Brighton and Young Stribling of Macon Ga. will leave the High Saturday February 23, according to details of the trip which have been completed.

It is expected that 250 Boston fans at least will make this trip at a cost of $140, which covers the entire expenses of the trip and is nearly more than 100 local fans have signified their intention of becoming members of the party.

Numerous features will be arranged for the trip and it is expected to prove one of the most successful events of the sort ever attempted in this city.

February 23, members of Eddie Mack's special party will leave Boston, South Station at 9 40 a. m. on Bimodal Pullman sleeping car train for Miami Florida. Train will consist of first class sleepers with section compartments and drawing room club car, diner, baggage car observation car, and will run through without change. Pullman porters provided each member two bed section. Table d'hote luncheon and evening dinner provided in diner.

February 25, arrived Miami about 10 00 a. m. Special train of Pullman sleepers will be parked, and the sleepers used by members of the party for night occupancy. No meals are provided in Miami (if any members prefer to go to a hotel while in Miami, instead of using the Pullman sleepers, hotel accommodations will be provided if available, at additional cost.)

February 28, leave Miami about 4 30 p. m. in special Pullman train for Boston. Pullman berths provided and all meals included.

March 2. Arrive New York about 9 00 a. m., and stop-over permitted for any members who may desire to visit a day or so in New York.

COST

$150 covers all expenses, Boston to Boston, (except meals in Miami).

Special $25 ringside seat (within the first 20 rows) included in the $150 rate. It will be known as the Boston Section. Jack Dempsey has set aside a special block of 300 seats for the Boston delegation.

TRIANGULAR MEET TODAY AT ARMORY

By DICK McSWEENEY

Five hockey games, bringing together such teams as Newton and St. Mark's, Domfret and Dean, Lawrence and Noble-Greenough, Belmont Hill and Middlesex School, Boston Latin and Newton Country Day, will give the hockey enthusiasts enough action today.

The big track event of the day will be held at the East Armory where Latin, Hyde Park and Charlestown compete for honors.

Latin with an abundance of strong performers in the 300 dash and 1000, is favored to take the meet.

Basketball conflicts are scheduled between the following: Schools Newton at Arlington, High at Acad emy at Maine Central, Wakefield at Stoneleigh, Worcester Academy at Amherst, Lawrence Academy at Huntington, Winchester at Belmont, Franklin at Sharon.

Coach Charlie Dickerman says that he will arrange interclass games among his basketball candidates this winter. Due to the fact that this is the first time in many years that Somerville has had a court squad, it has been found difficult to arrange games with other high school quintets, thus necessitating interclass contests.

Running around on an outdoor track which is swept by chilly winds does not appeal to Somerville athletes. Consequently, Somerville's track team is not in what one might call the best of shape.

Frank Ilse basketball, is in the process of development at Somerville, and there is little prospect of Somerville taking part in any dual meets this winter.

Wed Roxbury Roxbury Latin has taken part in two dual meets so far this season losing the one to Noble and Greenough, and winning the second meet with Tabor Academy, last Saturday.

Capt. Tom Gray has been turning out some great performances for Roxbury Latin in the 40-yard dash, hurdles, 300-yard dash and shot put.

Peace Gray has been doing well in the 300 and Dave Scott has been going through the 40-yard dash creditably and James Bonanno is getting a fast pace in the hurdles and high jump.

Kilery Clark, junior, is the leading point scorer for Roxbury Latin with 14 points to his credit. Kilery broke Roxbury Latin track records in both the 600 and 1000 last Saturday when he ran against Tabor Academy.

He clipped a second off the 600 mark and clipped another off the 1000 mark. It is a very remarkable thing for a track athlete to break two records in one day. If Kilery can keep up that kind of running he will be in the front rank of the schoolboys before long.

St. Joe's Hold Bouts on Saturday Night

All the leading amateur boxers from all parts of New England are forwarding their entry blanks to William H. Cuddy, director of St. Joseph's T. A. B., who will stage another amateur tourney in Commercial Hall, Bowdoin Sq., on Saturday night.

McGraw Introduced Kearns to Rickard

By JACK LAWRENCE

Copyright, 1929, by New York American and International Service, Inc.

WHEN Tex Rickard and Jack Kearns were introduced to each other in the bar of the old Manhattan Hotel on 42d st., their friendship began in almost the same way that it ended nearly ten years later in a battle.

They were introduced by John J. McGraw

Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, undisputed heavyweight champion of the world, was having a little drink at the Manhattan Bar the night Rickard knew a little about Dempsey but was not at all enthused about matching him with Jess Willard for the world's heavyweight championship.

"Dempsey may be a good fighter, but he's too small for the heavyweight ranks," said Tex. "He looks like a middleweight."

Jack Kearns wasn't so sure about Dempsey himself at that time, but he didn't think although Jack was already the champion.

Although Rickard had Willard under contract at the time, having guaranteed the champion $100,000 to meet any challenger he might name, Tex was pessimistic in his talk with Kearns in the Manhattan Bar that night.

"WILLARD wants too much money, there isn't an outstanding opponent and there's no place to hold the fight," he said.

Give me $50,000 for Dempsey's end and I'll furnish you with a fighter who will punch Jess Willard's ears off and I'll go out and get a place to hold the fight," Kearns declared.

"I don't care that man any more Martinus," said Rickard, addressing the bartender.

Kearns was in that sort of a financial predicament where he would have let Jack Dempsey in for a shot at the title for nothing and before the two left the Manhattan Bar that night he had Rickard's word that Dempsey was to be the man. They postponed the matter of terms until later.

Kearns borrowed some more money from another passer-by and that night was on a train bound for Toledo, Where Jack stepped off the train the mayor of that town was driving his car around the corner and holding out his hand to warn those behind him.

Jack stepped on the running board, shook the hand vigorously, and sold himself to the mayor inside of five minutes.

THEN he sold him and the Toledo Chamber of Commerce, the Willard-Dempsey fight for the heavyweight championship of the world. He had the whole town in the bag before he started back to New York to tell Rickard about it.

"And all I want for Dempsey's end is $50,000," he told the promoter after Tex had agreed to the Toledo idea.

The two argued for hours over the money Dempsey was to receive.

Kearns would have taken the fight for nothing, but he talked in five figures to Rickard and the latter finally agreed to put the thing up to the newspapermen. The boxing writers conferred among themselves and decided that Dempsey's end ought to be $27,500. That is the sum that Jack Dempsey received for knocking out Jess Willard.

"JACK," said McGraw, "I want you to meet a friend of mine. You're both in the same racket and I think you ought to know each other. Shake hands with Tex Rickard. I guess you've heard of him.

That moment marked the bringing together of two personalities that were similar in many respects. They were so similar that they clashed and grated on each other for years afterward.

But it was a highly productive friendship. Sharp, shrewd, fast thinking, the eyed each other as John McGraw introduced them. There was a perfunctory hand shake.

"Tex, I know you," said Kearns coldly. "You're the guy that tried to steal Les Darrey away from me. Instead of shaking hands I ought to punch you right on the beezer."

"A punch on the beezer would get you a smack on the whiskers and you've got enough spots on that four-tracked suit already," said Rickard.

THAT is the way the great collaboration of Rickard and Kearns began nearly 11 years ago, and it flourished along those lines for almost a decade. Neither seemed able to out-think the other, but the pair could out-think any combination that ever lived.

With a magnificent gesture Kearns tossed McGraw's $20 bill on the bar, called for another round of drinks and began the business of selling Jack Dempsey to Tex Rickard. At the time Dempsey

Martha Lee Tells of Chocolate Rules

ALTHOUGH I have talked and written a good deal about cocoa chocolate and the many delicious things that can be made from these chief some products of the cocoa bean like Cocoa or Twist New England house wives still are demanding "more," so here are some favorites

Co-Operative Martha Lee

Cocoa Fruit Pudding — One-half cup cocoa, 2-3 cup beef suet, 1 cup figs finely chopped 2½ cups soft bread crumbs 1 cup brown sugar, 2 eggs, 1-3 cup milk, ¼ tsp. salt

Chop suet figs and bread crumbs in meat chopper Add remaining ingredients and steam 3 hours Serve with hot chocolate sauce, or cream sweetened and flavored

Chocolate Wafers One quarter up butter ½ cup sugar, 1 beaten egg, ½ cup flour, ½ tsp baking powder, ¼ tsp. vanilla, ½ cup chopped raisins ¼ tsp. salt, 1 ounce cooking chocolate

Cream butter, adding sugar gradually while beating to a cream, add chocolate, melted vanilla and beaten egg and mix well Sift flour, salt and baking powder together. Add the raisins mix well and add this to the other mixture Drop by teaspoons onto buttered cake pan, about an inch apart, and bake in moderate oven. In place of raisins, a half walnut meat may be pressed into each wafer before baking

Wellesley Loaf Cake One-quarter cup butter 1 cup sugar, yolks 2 eggs, scant ½ cup milk, 1½ cups flour, 2 tsp. baking powder, whites 2 eggs, 2 squares cooking chocolate, ½ tsp. vanilla

Cream butter and add sugar gradually, while beating constantly; then add yolks of eggs beaten until thick, milk and flour mixed and sifted with baking powder Add whites of eggs beaten until stiff, chocolate (melted over hot water) and vanilla Turn into a buttered and floured shallow cake pan, and bake in moderate oven.

Remove from pan cover top with frosting and when frosting is set pour over, a little at a time, 2 squares cooking chocolate, which has been melted over hot water and spread evenly, using the back of a spoon

Fudge Cake—Three-quarters cup butter, 1 cup sugar, yolks 3 eggs, ½ cup milk, 2 cups flour, ¼ tsp salt 2 tsp baking powder, whites 3 eggs 2 ounces cooking chocolate, 1 tsp vanilla

Cream butter, add sugar gradually, while beating constantly, then add yolks of eggs well beaten Mix and sift baking powder and flour, and add alternately with milk to the first mixture Add chocolate melted over hot water, vanilla, and whites of eggs beaten stiff. Turn into two paper-lined and buttered seven-inch square pans and bake in a moderate oven Put between and on top fudge frosting

Walnut Cream Chocolate—Two and one-half cups granulated sugar, ½ cup condensed milk cream water, 3 or 4 tbsps. thick caramel syrup, ½ tsp. salt, 1 tsp vanilla, 1 lb dipping chocolate

Put the sugar, condensed milk and water over the fire to boil gently but often, and let cook to the soft ball stage, or to 234 F. Pour on a damp marble and let stand undisturbed until cold, turn to a cream then gather into a compact mass; cover with a bowl and let stand for 20 minutes; then knead the cream, put it into a double-boiler; add the caramel syrup and the vanilla; stir constantly while the mixture becomes waxy and thick add a few drops of hot water, if necessary, and drop the cream mixture into impressions made in cornstarch

Use 2 tsps. to drop the cream When the candy is cold, pick it from the starch With a small brush, remove the starch that sticks to the candy shapes Coat each piece with dipping chocolate

As each piece is coated and dropped onto the oil cloth, set half an English walnut meat upon the top.

For the fudge frosting and chocolate sauce, I think you'll find it most convenient to use a prepared chocolate sauce Not only can you use this ready prepared sauce for pudding sauces, ice cream sauces and frostings but it makes an ideal flavoring for the kiddies' milk shakes, egg nogs and hot cocoa late

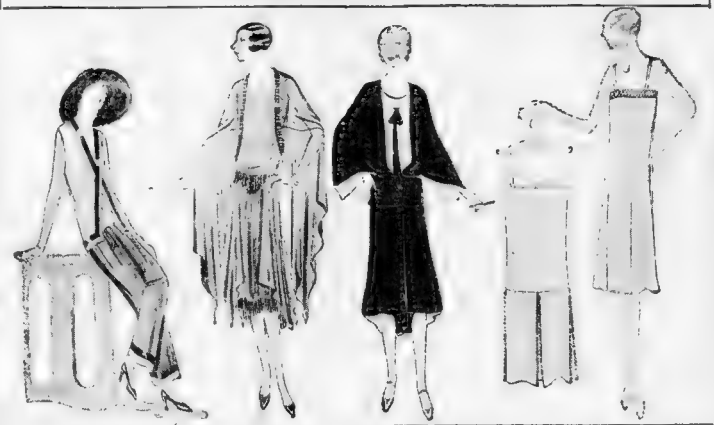
Many Designs in Latest Negligees



ALL garments that may be classed under the heading of de habille s or lounging attire are divided into two very uncompromising groups. Designers express the one type so and the decidedly feminine in the negligee, rich of fabric and trading as to drapery, the radical, the bizarre and the experimental are left to the realm of pajamas.

A past master of the ultra-modern in lounging pajamas, whether for beach or boudoir, is Mary Lee, who has a faculty for conceiving ever lamentable chance in fabric and design. Many of the currently popular types first saw the light of day with Nowitzky as godfather.

From this designer comes the loose pajamas sketched—an example of the experimental. All in chantung the sleeveless top is white and the trousers are red, kind of navy blue and red criss-cross on the blouse and trim the ankles in a simple yet startling note of the tricolor.

For those still harboring a conservative complex and who cannot as yet accept pajamas for their wear, Christiane of Paris creates lovely feminine models. The model with wing sleeves shown is in water green chiffon touched up effectively with gold lace, and is typical of the graceful deshabille garment.

However the designer who can express conservative types on the one hand achieves the bizarre on the other. Christiane also shows a black satin lounging robe elaborated The capacious jacket is buttoned over a sleeveless bodice of pink satin to which the skirt is attached. And the skirt is given a Turkish look by an extension at the back that fastens under the front at the waistline

Pajamas more and more are being accepted and are set forth in frocks and other costumes. Many fabrics and trimming features of feminine raiment have entered the field of pajamas, fancy printed and plain shantungs satins, all-over embroideries, hand painted de-signs.

With new style attention being paid to every manner of garment, costume slips have grown a trifle more decorative. There is greater detail as to cut yet trimming is applied with an eye to the necessary smoothness of this undergarment. Trimming often is of self-fabric in narrow folds sewed to the edges in scallops

Life Sometimes Is Tragic

By WINIFRED BLACK.

PRETTY thing—the girl in green.

Pretty as a peach, looked something like a peach, too, rosy and creamy and not too greasy.

Blue eyes, brown hair with a hint of gold in it, a dimple in one of her cheeks, a nice little roguish pout of a mouth—green dress, green hat, green shoes, sport stockings, smart little knot of flowers in the lapel collar of her coat, trim ankles, slim legs, oh yes, a decidedly pretty girl, no make-up—at least if it was made up you couldn't see it.

She was hopping right along the street humming a little tune to herself and being straight ahead of her. Suddenly a woman darted down a side street, a woman of middle age, very stout, decidedly, comfortable, well dressed, intelligent looking. She stepped up behind the girl and laid a hand on her shoulder.

THE girl never even turned her head, she never showed her face for one instant. Again the woman touched the girl. No response.

The middle-aged woman had a bag in her hand, quite a substantial sort of shopping bag, she drew off, struck the girl across the body, hard—the girl did not waver, she did not change color, she did not speak. She walked right along her eyes open, head up, not a tremor of the lips, not a shadow of expression on her pretty, stolid face.

The elderly woman dropped back the girl went on.

What do you suppose it was all about? Who was the girl who was the woman? Was it an elderly wife following some hearth-stricken girl who is taken the elderly woman's husband away from her?

WHAT a foolish thing to follow her in the street and try to frighten her! If husband is running after the little Green Girl it won't do any good to punish the Green Girl.

Divide it be a Pink Girl and a Blue Girl and a Red Girl and very probably a Yellow Girl before husband gets through. It is husband who is busy who worry about what color Girl he wears who happens to interest him at that particular moment? If it isn't one girl it will be another

But, somehow, I don't think this was the case of the Woman and the Girl, this time. The girl was too calm and unexcited—she looked as if she had just exactly that sort of thing happen to her before, but a good many times

Maybe it was mother trying to outwit daughter, maybe daughter needed the discipline, but why on earth to have it in a public street?

Elinor Glyn Says:

By LILNOR GLYN

DARE say there are more girls than the "Evelyn"—who wrote me who are huddled at in their home because they are trying to become refined, and advanced in life—so I am going to answer her plaint here. Human nature is at the root of almost every evil. The home-towners who resent Evelyn's going forward have an inferiority complex; they would like to do it, too, but have not the courage, and so they hate to see anyone passing them.

Evelyn should remain serenely indifferent, and go straight on to be good when she has arrived then will naturally, pick her boo—but the only thing that she must do is to be in her advance—pay attention or snobbishness by self-restraint. Simplicity and gentleness—absence of all boasting and sympathy with other aspirants. demonstrate true gentility. And above all, never to be ashamed of where you come from, who your parents were, or who were your friends.

There is an expression among the moving picture people—"You're humble before her when." This means, as obvious—because so many of them have splendidly risen from small what they hope will wound.

If Evelyn wants to rise without hampering things—she must be gracious, and not antagonize her companions. If her voice is becoming more refined and her pronunciation more continuous she must, if teased about it, say quite simply, "Well one has, or will be as nice as possible, and I am just trying to follow Elinor Glyn's teaching—it is her fault if I am irritated with me."

Talk to her Evelyn, and all the other girls that want to help to—and happiness. I will willingly take the blame, only you must not be hurt by ridicule, and go forward because it is good and fine to do so—but with an aim to trample on your detractors

So Evelyn, continue your upward advance unmoved by laughter. No one will laugh if you prove that you are true. People will only laugh if they sense that you are "putting on" airs.

Rolling Stones of Romance Today

By Beatrice Fairfax
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

ROLLING stones! What numbers of them there are in the world young men in love with travel and change and anything loathing the very name "responsibility!" How charming they are as comrades and, alas in many cases, how irresponsible as sweethearts! For it usually happens sooner or later, that even a rolling stone will fall in love and contemplate marriage. Then unless Mr. Rolling Stone mends his ways pronto with down to steady work and responsibility and thrift, there is likely to be trouble ahead. For he and his sweetheart may well sing the refrain,

"Oh, let us be married,
Too long we have tarried,
But what shall we do for a ring!"

Love is wonderful! But love, alone, will not pay the rent or even buy the wedding ring Of course, if one rolling stone falls in love with another, and both are willing to share the wandering life with its ups and downs, adventure and hardships, that is their own affair, their own treat or famine. But as a rule Mr. Rolling Stone falls in love with a nice, sensible girl, his opposite in temperament, who longs for home life and successful marriage.

While a rolling stone gathers no moss, yet the polish it acquires is most attractive. What is to be done when, as often happens, a practical girl falls in love with one of these rovers, an adventurer, a dreamer, who is most loveable but not exactly dependable as husband and head of a family.

Take the case of Mary, for instance:

"I am going with a young fellow who, I know, cares for me and I care for him. He is of a fine family, educated, intelligent But it seems he cannot get a job that suits him

"If he does get something, he doesn't stick long enough to find out whether it is for him He says he is willing to work at anything but that luck is against him But he says I am the girl for him and I believe he will marry me.

Now I really don't know what to do. I'd hate to give him up, because he is a fine type of young man to—Then again I figure how could I marry a fellow who is so poor that he can just live on what he is earning."

Mary, you are wise in thinking things over very carefully before marrying your rolling stone. But of course, there are rolling stones and rolling stones.

Is your friend idle and irresponsible? Is he a loafer? If so, watch out. He may consent to marry you and permit you to support him the rest of your life.

But there's another angle to the case A certain girl I know sized up her rolling stone very carefully and decided he loved her and would make good with the help of her sympathy and love, provided she gave him time and was patient. He had been unsettled and restless when he left college and went to work He threw up "jobs" with clocklike regularity. He did his share of complaining about hard luck But he was determined to get on. He was a good fighter cannot lick.

He went on from job to job, but each was a little better than the last, or at least give promise for the future, even though he sometimes threw up one job before the better one was in sight. Today he has a brilliant position, is steadiness itself, and has an enviable standing in the community. His wife may well congratulate herself because she believed in him and waited for him.

There is such a thing as noble discontent. The able creative mind will not limit itself. Some young men need more time than others to "find themselves" and build up their lifework. To sacrifice a great ambition for the sake of quick ready money which might make earlier marriage possible would be untrue to the finest impulse and ambition of such a man

"No, I'm not," replied the second college girl

"But why?" insisted her friend "Everything will fall flat without you"

"I'm not going," replied Anne with a frank, friendly smile, "because Bill can't afford to buy a dress suit to wear, and I'd rather stay home than go with anyone else but Bill"

Anne was one of the most popular girls on the campus—pretty as only child of rich parents. Bill her friend, was working his way through college. He would graduate in June, then hoped to work his way around the world, just seeing things as he went, before he settled down to work as an engineer.

Anne had already sized Bill up and decided her future happiness was worth encouraging and waiting for. So they remained good pals during the intervening years until finally Bill took a position as mining engineer, and they were married and began to wander contentedly about the world together Today Bill is one of the nation's most honored, successful men.

Long engagements are not wise: it is better to wait as a pal, expecting no promises. But, if the bond between you is real love, the time will come when he will be so established and grateful to realize that he is no longer a rolling stone but a stable part of the universe, with a home of his very own and in that home you!

Fads and Fashions

Granny's patchwork quilts may have inspired the smudgy colored quilted coats which promise to be much in the limelight in the summer mode. These quilted coats of Java and India prints are worn over dainty white frocks whose simplicity is enhanced by their exotic trimming of hand-drawn wool.

Caused By Catarrhal, Asthma Or Bronchial Trouble And Smoking

SIMPLE HOME REMEDY SOON STOPS THE COUGH

Some men can smoke constantly and never cough, but let them catch a deep-seated cold and get a touch of catarrhal, bronchial or asthmatic trouble and their delicate bronchial tubes or lungs and they are bound to have an awful cough Their system has difficulty throwing it off and the time they weaken and are apt to fall easy victim to respiratory lung diseases, pneumonia, fever or grippe.

NEED REAL REMEDY

Such coughs in themselves aren't dangerous or alarming and any man may easily rid himself of such troubles and at the same time fortify, strengthen and build up his system so nature will be impervious to future attacks. It merely depends on how long it has clung to him how long it will take to throw it off.

A couple large bottles of Lin-O-Nine, a nice tasting, creamy white mixture of Flaxseed Oil, Cassia, Eucalyptus, Betula, Irish Moss and Glycerine does the trick. It is nice to take, and the moment the lining almost instantly; checks the cough and rapidly assists nature in the work of throwing off the catarrhal, bronchial or asthmatic symptoms.

Lin-O-Nine is more thorough and faster working than nasty, nauseating Cod Liver Oil, which is about the only other real remedy for such troubles.

Lin-O-Nine is made of finest ingredients and guaranteed by the long established, nationally known Kerr Chemical Corp. Doctors specialists and thousands of users endorse it. Local druggists are featuring Lin-O-Nine. At this time of year grave dangers lurk in coughs and colds. Two sizes, 50c to $1.00.

There are many adults also who do not like the taste of eggs. Not only that, but many people, both children and adults, who do like eggs tire of them rather quickly.

Here is a very simple recipe for an egg-nog so delicious that it will satisfy everybody and it is almost impossible to taste egg in it.

Beat the yolk separately and blend in two teaspoons of sugar, then add half a pint of milk and whip in the beaten egg white; add ½ teaspoon of vanilla and beat until frothy. This delicious blend may be varied by adding a tablespoon of chocolate syrup, or a spoonful of ice cream.

This tasteful drink encourages an appetite for eggs and milk, both of which are such beneficial foods for children and adults. As every mother knows, it is absolutely necessary that her children have milk, and it is very important that they have eggs.

Note what a little sugar does for taste. Sugar is nature's ideal flavor. Sugar is not only nutriment in its most inexpensive form—it adds zest and enjoyment to nearly every healthful food that is known. There is no substitute for sugar in the daily diet. The Sugar Institute.

A Thrilling Mystery Story of Love and Danger

What Has Happened So Far

Dick Trent, Air Mail Service, flies young Tommy Rand, stranded in a drinking haunt, home Old Man Rand, owner of the line, thanks Dick. Mary Rand, beautiful daughter, is saved by Dick. Lawson, Dick's buddy, is missing. Dick comes across a burned plane and Lawson's dead body. A package containing $250,000 in government gold is missing. The only clue is a Luger pistol used to club Lawson's skull. Mary recognizes the pistol as her father's. Old Man Rand, questioned, admits giving the pistol to Lawson. He refuses, however, after talking to his son, Tommy, who has been missing again, to account for his actions during the early morning hours when the crime was committed. When the charred money bag is found in his own furnace Rand is arrested for the murder. Dick, with all the men in the service, is dejected. Mary, in hysterics, turns away from Dick, attributing her father's arrest to the pistol found by Dick.

After his next run Dick set out to visit the old man in jail. Old Man Rand tells Dick he is willing to pay the penalty. Returning from the jail, Dick meets Mary, who asks his forgiveness. Dick takes her in his arms and the two vow to solve the murder mystery to clear her father.

(Now Go On With the Story)

CHAPTER 15

BUT Dick had no hunch, not the slightest. He had said that in the hope of encouraging Mary. He wondered now what she had meant by saying she had a hunch, too.

Sitting in the train on the way back to the western airport, he had tried to think who it was she suspected.

For that was all it amounted to. If Old Man Rand were innocent, then someone else must be guilty. Dick thought of everyone, of the most fantastic possibilities, and rejected them all.

He reviewed again the evidence against Rand, the overwhelming array of circumstances that offered no loophole. The murder—done with Old Man Rand's gun; the knowledge that Lawson's plane had carried the money that morning—known by Old Man Rand; the time during which the murder had occurred—ten minutes when Old Man Rand had declined to explain his whereabouts; and last, the final, damning piece of evidence, the money sack itself, discovered in the very furnace of Old Man Rand's home.

The state was probably preening itself on an unbeatable case. And against that cumulation of evidence, Dick could offer so far only his mere instinctive belief that Rand was not guilty.

But who was? Who was? He asked himself the pointless question, while the tram mocked the words in a kind of endless refrain of steel grinding on steel.

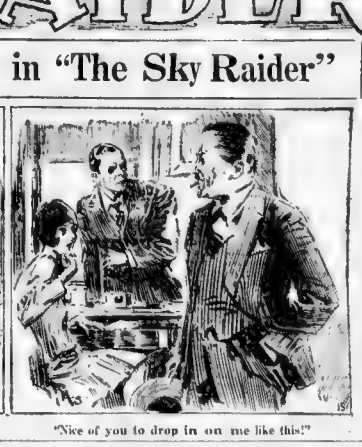
He had told Mary he was confident. He was confident still, but he realized now the enormity of the obstacles before him.

He took off with the mail the following morning, and flying in low weather, reached Rand Field itself about noon.

He had dreamed of a dozen solutions during the night, all equally bizarre and he was no nearer to any possible plan of action than hours ago, for all that he had kept his thoughts obstinately circling around one center.

He phoned Mary, who suggested that he meet her for luncheon in downtown restaurant.

"Carmichael! That's who I mean!"



"Nice of you to drop in on me like this!"

They found a table in a sheltered corner where they could talk. Her eyes explored his face with such warm tenderness that for a moment he managed to forget the task to which he had committed himself.

There was strength as well as charm in that oval face of hers; no need to pretend to a girl like that. He gave her the truth simply, telling her he had no idea of how to proceed or where to look.

Somehow she managed to smile. "Then I'll have to tell you, too," she said. "I had no idea, either. Each of us has been trying to encourage the other."

"Perhaps we haven't tried. You see if we really did, we might——"

But she got no further. "Wait!" he cried. "Just wait!" He put his knuckles to his brow, and frowned as though his life depended on it. Then nodding grimly, he met her tense stare.

"Who?" she asked.

But he kept her in suspense a moment longer. "Obviously, it was murder for robbery. We know that much, don't we?" he said at last. "And it could not have been done by the Federal Reserve shipment."

"Yes."

"Father, of course, and the Federal Reserve people and——"

"I do."

"Why? Outside of the fact that he knows about the money, I'm sure I don't know what. I've never liked him——"

She sat, silent, thoughtful for a brief while. Then she said: "Dick, I think you may be right. There's a chance at least. But how—how could he ever find out——"

"There's one way we can try. He has a house within sight of the field."

"Yes, I know where it is."

"Well . . . He found a cigarette and lit it. "Well, are you game to break in, hunt through his stuff, try to find proof?"

She gave a little shiver. "It's like being thieves ourselves, isn't it? Suppose we're wrong, and suppose——well, I mean, suppose someone should find out?"

"Even if we were wrong, it would be better than doing nothing, wouldn't it?" At last, Mary agreed. Carmichael was out of the office at this time.

Crossing cautiously through the hedge that walled his small attractive house, they walked to the porch, tried the front door softly. It was locked. Dick crept to one of the low windows that gave under his hand. He wrenched loose and in less than a minute had let Mary in.

When he had said that he suspected Carmichael, he had told the truth. [illegible] superintendent was [illegible] times a quarter of a hundred dollars [illegible] but in breaking into his house, Dick had little hope of uncovering anything. Even if it did, could there be found [illegible] Could a man who had [illegible] Lawson murder be so reckless as to keep the stolen money or any other evidence near [illegible]

Carmichael's house was two stories high. It was neat, trim [illegible] had an air of comfort. A bachelor, over-fond of his home, [illegible] and in every corner were easy chairs, thick rugs, tables piled high with books and papers. Dick had never heard of [illegible]

He opened a cellarette. It was full of evidence of crime, but of a lesser sort than the one he now hunted.

With Mary at his side he explored the second story. What was he really hunting? Incriminating documents, the money itself? Perhaps neither, perhaps only the unexpected. Mary was stooping over a drawer, with a feminine delight in exploring the forbidden, while Dick pulled books out of their shelves and peered behind them, when the unexpected really happened. This was in the form of Carmichael's surprised voice as he stood from the doorway:

"Nice of you to drop in on me like this. Find everything you want?"

Dick Tells Mary About His Suspicions in Plot

'Rainbow Chasing'; The Exciting Story of Madge Sayre and Her Search for Love

By THOMAS EDGELOW

CHAPTER 21

SOME hour or so after leaving Long Island, Madge saw a little to the east in the distance. Directly beneath them was a valley fringed by green-blue hills, down which several streams splashed over rocks.

"That is Stroudsburg," Carroll had written on the pad he passed Madge. "Isn't the country lovely—a background for you."

Madge took pencil and wrote:

"You didn't say you loved me! And I want to come down about here. Tam says he would like to stay here."

Carroll banked the plane and turned in wide circles, flying lower and lower. Soon, her, as Madge looked over the side, she could see meadowland and the rich brown earth where corn was green. Nestling at the foot of a little hill was a gray stone farmhouse, the red barn adding a nice note of color. Cattle and a few horses were grazing, and Madge decided she wished he could live there. A man was looking at them, appearing to Madge a tiny toy figure.

She realized Carroll was going to make a landing, as he circled again some distance from the edge of a long field. Then he shut off his engine and allowed the plane to glide down like a bird. The wheels touched and the plane leapt upward a few feet, only to touch again, and they were taxiing smoothly to a halt.

"Neatly done, Ecstasy! Congratulate me and kiss me!" Carroll was smiling at Madge as he helped her from the machine.

"No kisses!" she said, almost yearningly. Then she whispered: "I love you too much, Carroll! Unbearably much."

But he would have kissed her despite her protests had not a man been approaching them eagerly.

"Is this your place?" Carroll asked with that charm of manner which won for him so many friends. "You must blame the beauty of your surroundings for me making myself so free."

"You're quite welcome," the other replied. "First time one of those things has come down on my farm."

"It's too lovely for words!" Madge smiled at him. "I've never seen a more beautiful place. I wonder if you could tell me if there is anyone round here who does," he remarked. "Wouldn't do any harm to ask her. Of course, she's here."

The three of them walked towards the house. The farmer, who told them his name was Henry Ferris, seemed far more interested in the strange machine that had descended from the clouds in the occupants. He plied Carroll with eager questions as to the way he handled the plane. Madge felt that she liked this man. He was in the early 30's, tall brown and sinewy, with an honestly-pleasant rather than a good-looking face, and kindly gray eyes.

"Folks who dropped from the sky, Martha," Henry Ferris explained. "Looking for somewhere to board. I told them you were the boss and that I wasn't allowed to think for myself."

"Oh, Henry, you do, Henry!" His wife smiled affectionately at him. "You always do want to let folks think you're henpecked."

"We are looking for somewhere to stay for the rest of the summer, Mrs. Ferris," Carroll was saying smoothly. "I am an artist—my name is Carroll Dudley. I shall be here whenever I can be, but I have to be in Pittsburgh on business, and shall be flying back and forth. Mrs. Dudley, my wife, needs country air, so if you could take us both in, you would put us under an obligation."

"Oh, I think that could be arranged," she said pleasantly, and they went on to speak of terms.

"Well, Mrs. Ferris is going to take a chance on us," Carroll explained to Madge as she returned with Celeste.

"My wife here adores the country, Mrs. Ferris"

Madge felt she was trapped. She could not now tell these simple farmer folk that she and Carroll were not yet married.

Carroll drew her aside on the pretence of admiring the small flower garden as Ferris offered to fetch the suitcases from the plane in a wheelbarrow.

"I had to tell them we were married, Ecstasy!" he protested. "Have you any idea what a country place is like, and the ways they would gossip? If they knew you were getting a divorce, they would not have taken us in."

"I—I suppose it was the only way out," Madge admitted, not too willingly.

All the same, it was with a little mischievous smile that on her return Madge said to Mrs. Ferris in Carroll's hearing:

"I forgot to explain that we shall want two rooms, Mrs. Ferris. My husband and I always occupy separate rooms."

Supper was an ample and delicious country meal, with crisply fried chicken and fresh vegetables from the farm. And later, when Madge went up to her room to unpack, Celeste Ferris, the children, called to her from another room: "Mad—Mrs. Dudley!"

She had told the little girl to call her by her first name, but wishing those childish lips to call her by a name that was not her own. Madge entered the room to find Celeste sitting up in bed, a doll in her arms.

"Shouldn't you be asleep, dear?" Madge asked affectionately.

So, sitting down by the bed, Madge obediently began:

"Once upon a time, there was a girl by the name of Cinderella, and she lived with her stepmother and two awful, horrid older sisters," and on to the end.

"Tell it again, Madge! Please tell it again!" Celeste begged, when Madge had finished and Cinderella had been married to the prince, to live happily ever afterwards.

"Not tonight, dearie. It's over so late for a little girl." Madge said softly, smoothing the black curls.

"What, dear?"

"Have you got a little girl of your own that you tell stories to?"

"No, dear!"

But after Celeste had fallen asleep, Madge still sat by her, pondering.

"Have you a little girl of your own?" That sweet childish voice rang again in her ears. Madge's throat tightened and eyes were misting with vague tears.

For the first time she realized that after they were married, Carroll would not want babies. Carroll applied limits, but not fatherhood. The flying-painter was a lover—yes! But later on when the novelty and thrill of love wore off their hair, would there be growing children to comfort them?

Madge knew maternal yearnings she had never before suspected—knew, too, that they must go unsatisfied. But she had chosen the rainbow-path, and she must follow it to its end.

Carroll called to her, and Madge went downstairs.

"The stars are shining almost as brightly as your eyes," he whispered to her. "Come out with me, Delight!"

She linked her arm through his, and they strolled across a meadow. They entered a little wood through which a stream gurgled, and then to their infinite joy, in a small clearing, they discovered a miniature waterfall.

"It is singing to you, Ecstasy! It is trying to tell you just how much I love you!"

"You're so sweet, so sweet," he whispered tensely. He was wearing a tennis shirt with short sleeves and his muscular arm pressed about Madge's waist she thrilled at the feel of that arm, but she pushed it away.

"Carroll, you must remember our bargain!" she pleaded. Turning on her knees she slid him to her favorite spot by the waterfall. Carroll fidgeted a little and for a little smoked in silence. Then he turned to her:

"I read in the paper of Winchester's return," he said slowly. "Do you realize what it means?"

"Yes-yes," she answered hesitatingly.

"He has read your letter?"

"I imagine so. In my over-sensitiveness at my position, or was Carroll's tone a shade less tender, a shade more overbearing?

"I wish you wouldn't be such a show giver," he went on, looking at her with a peculiar expression. "Remember, I'm the law always dick. It may be months before you are free to marry me, and I am a man who is not very easily."

Fierce resentment was in Madge's heart at what he had said and the way he had said it; and to make matters worse, he took her forcibly in his arms and attempted to kiss her, but she wrenched free.

Madge's eyes blazed. "Oh, can't you ever keep your word?" she stormed. "Don't make too certain of me, Carroll! You haven't got me yet!"

They made a slow way through the underbrush and when they came to a tiny stream Iris gave a little shriek and declared she couldn't possibly cross the stepping-stones.

"I'd get dizzy and fall off," she cried, "and I did so want to go on!"

"Bosh," Mary thought. "I wouldn't have believed it, even of Iris—"

He said, "Well—" and picked up Iris as easily as if she had been a child—carried her flushed and glowing to the opposite bank. She kissed him impulsively and put her arms about his neck and clung to him a minute before placing her feet on the ground.

Mary stood there smiling at him, mumbled in the grave eyes. "Honest, kid boy—is that bulge on your left side a revolver?" And when he looked at her sharply, not answering, she sat down on a boulder and opened her vanity case. "Don't tell me," she went on, "that you're one of the gunmen they're chasing out of the city?"

Mary sensed rather than saw the sudden movement which brought his back against a tree—caught the savage question in his eyes and shook her head. He needn't think she had to tell.

Iris patted her cheeks with the powder-puff, looked over her nose, twirled up an [illegible] curl, threw a circle of light on her face. "Old Prince Hal is going to invite you to tea tomorrow," she said.

The walk back was a nightmare to Mary.

She began by trailing along behind the two as she had come, only now there was no room for jealousy or even disappointment in her thoughts. She was hot and cold and [illegible] watching the hard set [illegible] Mullins jaw, the lingering suspicion in every cat-like movement. Iris was jubilant, flaunting her thrill, and Mary felt a stinging shame that her cousin could do this.

"Tell me about it!" Iris fluttered a bit and hung to him. "What have you been doing, Danny?"

He stooped and waited for Mary to come up. "Ask her," he said, rather grimly.

The colorless creased Iris' face and [illegible] "Oh, I'll never tell all the time, Mimi! You didn't tell me!"

"But—why, you're not going to go on seeing him? You wouldn't [illegible] a fool of a child. I'm sure if you say I perfectly slay you I shall scream—I shall indeed!"

To Mary's surprise The Spook appeared for seeing a girl from across the lake such as Iris could win Danny indeed to a question. "Kid, Lady," she gasped, "how quaint!"

"I'm going to show Mr. Mullins the garden." Mary smiled to her aunt as Danny followed her to the terrace.

He looked at her [illegible] and his eyes were so miserable that she put out her hand. He crushed her fingers [illegible] and was gone—but he had said something. She thought it was "good kid," though she couldn't feel sure. But The Spook thought of Iris on his way back.

Some how? Pretending she could not cross over the stream—how warm and soft her arms were around his neck! He'd had an impulse to crush her up against him before he put her down that day—like the shining gray eyes, the lips raised almost to his face. He wished now he had done this; the thought of it burned through him and set him wavering. He was not accustomed to giving up what he wanted and he wanted the delicate, satiny Iris very much indeed.

He lay in the evening decision not to see her again was half-hearted; in the end of sorts with himself and all the world.

"Been looking over the boy? Say, he's a [illegible] I'll never get all the time, Mimi? You didn't tell me?

HERE ARE TWO STOWAWAYS I FOUND IN A LIFE BOAT

"MY dear, I can't BEAR it because the most POSITively WEIRD INcidence transpired JUST as we'd got GOing on this divine CRUISE in Mr. WEALTHington's great YACHT, my dear! ACtually, it was too HIGHt because one saLU brious MORN while MOTHer and I were SPRAWling VAGUEly in our DECK chairs and I was READing aTENTively and thinking how simply MARvellous it was to get aWAY from that POISonous round of PARties back HOME and parTICularly those obNOXious PIPsqueaks ARab and NOIsy and PHWHEN and BULL, Daddy suddenly appeared and began making WISEcracks about playing a round of GULF in the GULF stream and, my dear, whenEVer Daddy starts PUNning, something TRAgic ALways deVELops—I mean I've NEVer known it to FAIL! Well, ANYways, my dear, sure eNOUGH the FIRST thing I KNEW Mr. WEALTHington, looking FRIGHTfully anNOYed, came LEAPing UP grasping PHWHEN AND BULL in either HAND, my dear—can you COPE with it? HONestly, my dear, I was PRACticably ready to ROLL over and BUTter myself with disMAY because I was THORoughly SUNK, no less, but ANYways it seems the odd souls had STOWED aWAY in a LIFEboat or something! Wouldn't you KNOW something like that would transpire? GOSH, I'm simply LIVID about the situation and I think it would REALly serve them RIGHT if Mr. WEALTHington made them ROW HOME at this point, my dear—I mean I ACtually DO!"

GOOD TIME GUY

A Ring for a Belle

By Frank Smiley

GUY HAS FINALLY REALIZED THAT MARY IS THE ONLY GIRL, AND HE IS GOING TO PROPOSE TO HER.....
MA, I'M GOING OUT AND BUY THE RING.... IF MARY TURNS MY PROPOSAL DOWN, I PROMISE I'LL NEVER LOVE ANOTHER GIRL.
SONNY, MARY WILL WANT YOU TO PROMISE THAT IF SHE ACCEPTS YOU,
THIS IS THE LATEST INNOVATION IN ENGAGEMENT RINGS— AN ADJUSTABLE BAND TO FIT ANY FINGER— JUST IN CASE
I WANT THE MOST EXPENSIVE DIAMOND YOU HAVE.... IF I HAVE MONEY INVESTED, I'LL BE ABLE TO TALK CONVINCINGLY.
WELL, WOULD YOU LOOK AT GUY GREEN BUYING A DIAMOND RING FOR I BET I KNOW WHO I'LL TELL THE DUMBLE THAT HER FAMILY ASKED ME TO GET IT IN THE PAPER.
WE'LL MAKE A GOOD STORY OUT OF THIS! HOW BIG WAS THE RING?

BAER FACTS

WE attended the trial of Oklahoma Minnie. In the jury box were 12 good men and who.

On the judicial rumble seat was Judge Burmister, the man who broke up the hoop-rolling gang in the Children's playground.

Otto—she asked the Judge to call her that for short sentences—did not seem dazzled by the proximity of the law.

So far as she was concerned the finger of scorn was only a lady finger.

She knew that justice was blindfolded, but she thought it was for a cigarette test.

The District Attorney had only spoken a minute when Oke discovered to her disgust that he couldn't dance or sing.

It was a peaceful scene. Oke had brought along her bouncers to prevent disturbances.

She had also assigned her best waiter to the jury box.

After the Judge had thundered a denunciation, Oke asked the witnesses to give the little boy a big hand.

But when the Sheriff was going to Atlanta, Oke did not accompany him on the train.

AVOID UGLY PIMPLES

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, the wonderful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; know them by their olive color. Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

A FAMOUS LOVE AFFAIR

By COZETTE DOUGLASS

SIGISMONDE, to whose genius we are indebted for one of the rarest gems of the Renaissance, the Church of St. Francis at Rimini, was strange to say, one of the most dissolute men of his time. Many women claimed him as lover, but one only held his heart from early youth until Death, and that one Isotta degli Atti. She was the inspiration of his poetry, and although he married twice before claiming her as his wife, and many love affairs ran through the thread of his life, Isotta was the one true love of his life.

When he was placed in power over Rimini, he was affianced to the daughter of Count Carmagnola, but when that famous leader was put to death as a traitor, Sigismonde broke the engagement and married Ginevra d'Este, daughter of the Duke of Ferrara. A few years later Ginevra died shortly after the birth of a son, and it was hinted that she had been poisoned by her husband. Two years after her death, he married Polissena daughter of Francesco Sforza, but his passion for Isotta was so great that he determined to make her his wife. Accordingly, poor Polissena was found strangled, and he immediately married Isotta. Strange to say, Isotta was absolutely cleared of any complicity in her lover's crimes.

She was celebrated for her beauty, and being of noble birth, was cultured and refined. She wisely reigned over Rimini during Sigismonde's absences, although it is said that she could neither read nor write.

Intrigue, hatred, licentiousness—all had their part in this romance of the Middle Ages, but it is one that never can be forgotten as long as the temple of St. Francis stands, or there is a historian who cannot fail but heed the story of this love which survived everything.

Theme Song: Wreck of the Old Ninety-Seven

PLATE XV concludes the serial sermon, entitled, "The Drunkard's Children." You have seen mother, father, son and brother, sink down, down, down into the bottomless pit of iniquity. And now you see the once innocent daughter—deserted, destitute and gin-mad, doubling for Clara Bow. Why, oh, why! must girls risk their necks jumping off bridges when practically every modern hotel is equipped with a bath for every room!

WHEN you feel that cold coming on—head it off with Bayer Aspirin. Almost everybody knows how these tablets break-up colds—but why not prevent them? Take a tablet or two at the very first sign of a cold and spare yourself a lot of inconvenience and suffering. Do the same when a headache threatens, or when you feel the least twinge of neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatism or similar pain. Bayer Aspirin is sure relief, as many have discovered. It is quite harmless, as physicians have long declared. It does not affect the heart, so you may take Bayer Aspirin freely. Use as a gargle for sore throat, to remove the infection. You can get the genuine at any drugstore. Bayer Aspirin. Bayer on every package and on each tablet identifies the genuine.

DINE AND DANCE

Silver Slipper Revue on Friday

Every Friday night is theatrical night at the Silver Slipper, 111 Arlington st., only a few steps from the Statler Hotel. This week Le Von's Silver Slipper revue is featured at two performances. There is dinner dancing from 6 to 9 o'clock without cover charge. Mlle. Doloras, formerly at the Cocoanut Grove, is mistress of ceremonies and one of Boston's most beautiful night club entertainers.

Mlle. Doloras

Grand Opening of Yen Ho Next Week

Yen Ho, Chinese-American restaurant, is undergoing extensive alterations, which will be completed for a grand opening about the middle of next week. The entire interior has been redecorated and the orchestra pit has been relocated to provide a more spacious dancing floor. A canopy of Chinese design has been erected over the dance floor. New booths have been installed and a visit there will reveal a more attractive restaurant than before.

Theatrical Night Is Popular Feature

Theatrical night at the Symphony restaurant, every Thursday night, is gaining in popularity. About a dozen different vodvil acts, in addition to the regular show and a number of guests from the big shows playing in town, provide an excellent evening of entertainment. Perley Stevens and his Velvet Tone recording orchestra, furnish dance music.

Scottish Week at the Mah Jong

This is Scottish week at the Mah Jong, Boston's newest Chinese-American night club, Warrenton and Tremont sts. Scotty Holmes and his orchestra are providing some extra attractions. Tonight is theatrical night and a number of the leading headliners from local theaters have been invited. A big review and a half a dozen acts of vodvil in addition to the guest talent is in store for those who dine at the Mah Jong tonight.

Egyptian Room Open Evenings

'Chinese Queen'

Roof Garden at Elks Hotel Is Popular

The Roof Garden Restaurant, located on the 15th floor of the Elks Hotel, is one of the popular places in town for dinner and supper dancing. A regular $2 dinner is served from 6:30 to 8:30, and the service for the supper dance from 9:15 to midnight, is a la carte.

Scenes of Orient at Yoeng's Kenmore

Little Beverly King, daughter of Harry King, manager of Yoeng's Kenmore, is scoring a big hit this week at the Chinese village, featuring one week in China. Miss King sings several popular songs. Harry Davis and his orchestra are appearing in oriental costume. The Petite Review with Misses Cola, Nolen and Hale do a clever oriental dance. King has transformed the restaurant into a Chinese village at a big expense.

OLD FILMS TO BE REMADE AS TALKIES

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service.

LOS Angeles, Jan. 30—The economical trend of the talkies probably never occurred to the producers until they started looking for stage plays. Stage successes that were produced silently suddenly assume value and are now being resurrected with their lines.

Some three or four years ago Corinne Griffith made "Lilies of the Field," a New York stage hit. I suppose all pictures go the ideal version was all right but there was much that couldn't be done without dialogue. In brief, Marie Dow on the stage was more effective than Corinne Griffith on the screen.

Now "Lilies of the Field" will be taken out of its tissue paper wrappings and put into circulation in a new talkie dress. Miss Griffith is sailing for Europe March 20 and her first picture after her return will be "Lilies of the Field" with "A Most Immoral Lady" following.

George Fitzmaurice, who curiously enough is the director selected by Jesse Lasky to direct Norma Talmadge's next, in all likelihood "Smilin' Thru," also a period, will direct Miss Griffith.

This is certainly a subtle compliment to Fitzmaurice's ability to ask him to make a picture that has already been produced and with the same star. Agnes Christine Johnston is writing the Griffith scenario and it may interest you to know it's going to be an entirely new "Lilies of the Field."

* * *

SOME months ago Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sent out word that they yearned for a golden-haired goddess for "Trader Horn." Blondes with every shade of hair from palest ash to deep golden red answered the call. The blondes weren't going to make the mistake of overlooking this opportunity.

Now I hear tell that Mary Nolan is the gal who wins the coveted role. The picture is to be made in Africa and it is going to be one of M. G. M.'s specials for 1929. Miss Nolan was borrowed for the part. Lucky for her that she is a blonde. Isn't it the truth?

* * *

THE First National studios were all agog when word was wafted through the various offices that Milton Sills' picture had been called off. You just can't keep rumors down. One story is to the effect that Milton Sills is having so much trouble with his income tax that he has to devote all his time the next few weeks to explaining to Uncle Sam various figures.

COLLEGE EVENT

Misses Margaret M. Crowley of Arlington and Mary Rose Connors of Malden, who are members of the committee planning the "Junior Prom" of Emmanuel College girls.

COLLEGE GIRLS PLAN 'PROM'

The crowning event in the social year at Emmanuel College will be held at the Hotel Somerset, when the class of 1930 puts on their annual "Junior Prom." This event is looked forward to by alumnae and students of the Chestnut Hill girls' college. Miss Elizabeth V. Cloney of Milton, president of the junior class, will be promenade leader this year.

The committee in charge is headed by Alice M. Grandigan of Charlestown and includes Mary Rose Connors of Malden, Margaret M. Crowley of Arlington, Marguerite E. Burke of Lynn, Katherine E. Lawler of Holyoke and Josephine Alberghini of Lynn.

Officers of the class who will be members of the reception committee, are Eleanor K. Donovan of Peabody, vice-president; Eileen G. Meany of Mattapan, secretary, and Frances I. O'Brien of Arlington, treasurer.

ECONOMY FOLK DANCE TONIGHT

More than 1500 persons are expected to be present tonight at the annual dance of the Economy Benefit Association, an organization including in its membership officials and employes of the Economy Grocery Stores, Inc.

The association is the foremost group of its type in the United States. It is maintained to provide free medical care, sick benefits and death benefits for its members.

The entertainment committee in charge of tonight's dance is headed by Chairman Thomas Lavine, aided by Aaron Kaitz, Charles L. Parker, Charles W. Day, and Nick Elias. Officers of the association are Michael Nazarro, president; Clifford Smart, vice-president; Jon Hayes, secretary, and Frank J Daigle, treasurer.

Morey Pearl's orchestra will furnish music. Favors will be distributed. Employes of 360 Boston Economy stores will be present with their friends.

Important News in Ark. for Hub Woman

A Boston woman, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Greatorex, and who is believed to be living somewhere in the metropolitan area, has news of great importance awaiting her at Hot Springs, Ark., according to an announcement at police headquarters.

Supt. Michael H. Crowley has received a letter from Hot Springs asking that the former Miss Greatorex communicate with him, to have her letter forwarded to Hot Springs. The nature of the information for the woman was not indicated in Supt. Crowley's announcement.

Funeral Tomorrow

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning for Patrick J Coyne, 70, head of the Coyne Manufacturing Co. of Waltham, who died suddenly at his home, 48 Commonwealth rd., Watertown.

CRUISERS BILL TO BE VOTED NEXT WEEK

Washington, Jan. 30 (INS)—The administration's "big navy" bill for construction of 15 new cruisers and a huge aircraft carrier, will be enacted next Monday or Tuesday, it was conceded today by the opposition, following agreement limiting debate by each speaker to 10 minutes.

The bill will be adopted virtually as it passed the House almost a year ago, including the time clause, opposed by President Coolidge and President-elect Hoover. This provides that one-third of the new warships shall be stated during each of the next three years.

The bill likewise will call for construction of half of the ships in government navy yards and half in private yards.

The bill provides for replacement of virtually all obsolete cruisers and in this respect will bring the navy closer to parity with the British. The cost will be $275,000,000, a compromise figure. "Big Navy" advocates at first demanded a $700,000,000 construction program.

The "Big Navy" bloc has a minimum of 59 seagoing fighters in the bill in its present form.

Two proposed amendments may lead to interesting votes. One, by Senator Norris, Republican, of Nebraska, would request President Coolidge to summon an Anglo-American disarmament conference within the next year to establish parity between the British and American navies, by reducing both.

The Norris proposal also would authorize the President (it would be Hoover) to suspend the construction program, pending the outcome of the suggested conference.

LOWELL MAYOR CUTS OWN PAY; WONDERFUL!

Wilmington, Jan. 30 (A.P.)—Mayor Thomas H. Braden of Lowell, addressing a meeting of men's clubs of the Congregational and Baptist churches here, declared that he intends to reduce his own salary from $5000 to $4000 this year in keeping with his program of general retrenchment in municipal expenditures.

Other city officials will also be called upon to accept reductions if the mayor has his way, he stated.

Want Warships

A Prophetic Note

Hoover's Declaration That "Employment of Citizens Is a National Problem"

President-elect Herbert Hoover has sounded a prophetic note in advance of taking office as Chief Executive of the United States. He has said in effect that the employment of citizens is a national problem.

With the tremendous forces of invention, scientific discovery and organization all working to release men from manual labor, the problem of employment is not a local one, nor is it one that may rest safely upon agreements between employes and employers, however valuable they may be as temporary expedients.

There is the fundamental economic fact to be reckoned with that modern conditions are providing more leisure. This puts upon the political and industrial organization of the nation the problem of seeing that additional leisure does not mean enforced idleness.

Since the motor car has come into general use the aver age person appreciates the value of the "fly-wheel." It is necessary to carry the extra weight to absorb the momentum and smooth out the direct thrust of the piston

But even the amateur mechanic realizes that he quickly reaches the limitations of usefulness in the weight of a fly-wheel. The far greater latitude is in getting proper combustion.

The situation is most encouraging. With the new supply of leisure comes an additional demand. The man who works at his chosen task for eight hours has need of all the additional time he can secure to apply to the study of the work he is engaged in. The successful man must be a spe cialist.

Consider the doctor. The amount of reading he should do to keep in touch with the advance of medical science is appalling. Step down to the janitor's department. His acquaintance with laws and ordinances dealing with ordinary hygiene, his knowledge of the many devices that are continually added to equipment of buildings and the facilitating of his work constantly become more essential.

A problem of the hour is to secure a balance between the employment of labor and the employment of leisure. It will be solved only when it allies the political and the economic activities of the nation.

How We Spend Money

That Not Accounted for May Mean Difference Between Success and Failure

Forty-five cents out of the average American dollar is spent for food, according to the Bureau of Public Utility information, and six cents on light, heat, water and carfare. This would allow about twenty-four cents for rent and twenty-five cents for other purposes.

Where does that final quarter go? Clothing and recreation get most of it, doubtless, and education may get a little How much is saved or invested? That is the important question.

Take pencil and paper and figure out as closely as you can just how one of the dollars you earn goes. The result may astonish you and should be instructive. If you are an average American, you will probably find a substantial percentage that you cannot account for at all. That amount may represent the difference between success and failure through the years.

Look Out! Curves Ahead!

The Robust, Full-Figured Girl Approved by a London Producer

All signs and portents indicate the return of plumpness in beauty. Charles Cochran, the London producer of revues, asserts that the robust, full-figured girl can dance as well as her slim sister and dance longer.

Dress manufacturers, in convention assembled at the Hotel Astor, New York City, exhibited 140 new frocks, all of ampler yardage than required by the present modes, and all designed to accentuate the curvilinear grace of the full fleshed models.

Finally, Billy Watson, of burlesque fame, testified in court that he made more than $1,000,000 out of his celebrated classic production, the "Beef Trust."

Assuredly, evidence of this pos'tive nature means something—but we shall see what we shall see!

Mothers-in-Law

Magistrate Ellperin of New York City compelled a prisoner to kiss his mother-in-law to obtain freedom and how the humorists chuckled over it! Why is it that a mother-in-law is considered funny, of necessity, while mothers are regarded as little less than saints?

All mothers-in-law are mothers, too. Certainly they do not change from affectionate, self-sacrificing, sentimental creatures into comic strip viragoes when their sons and daughters marry, often without consulting them. If the census figures showed the number of young couples who are being supported in whole or part by mothers-in-law, the object of the old joke would be reversed.

HUB OF THE UNIVERSE

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

ONE conclusion drawn from recent astronomical exploration is that the Milky Way (which includes within its boundaries the whole universe known to us, with the exception of the distant wisps of the spiral nebulæ, now supposed to be exterior "universes") is in rotation about a definite center. This center, according to Dr. Harlow Shapley, is in the constellation Sagittarius, about 50,000 light-years away from us. The indications are that ten thousand million stars circle about this universal hub, and that at our distance from it the time required for a complete turn is 200,000,000 years.

Now, 50,000 light-years correspond to nearly 300,000,000,000,000,000 miles, and a circle having a radius of that length has a circumference of about 1,884,000,000,000,000,000 miles. Considering the uncertainties of the estimates, we may lump this as two quintillion (2,000,000,000,000,000,000) miles, which is the distance that our little earth, hopping along with the slave gang of suns to which its own sun belongs, has to cover in 200,000,000 years, the rate of travel being more than 8,000,000,000 miles a year!

But apparently these slaves of the hub, tramping with the thunder march of suns, too mighty for human ears to hear, around the treadmill of the universe, are unruly under their yokes, for individual watching shows that they move in diverse directions, and at various speeds, among one another. The imagination is daunted by the lurching, halting, plunging, of the great gang as it swings along occasionally, if theories be right, two huge straining orbs approach so close that their mutual attractions grasp them like the tentacles of battling octopi in a struggling embrace, from which spout fiery gouts that slowly collect and condense into worlds. For so, says the plan-testimol hypothesis, our own earth and its sisters were born, to be rocked, as now appears, in the cradling rhythm of an endless voyage.

It is a very old idea that the whole starry system rotates around a center. More than once before it has been thought that that center was discovered. Before the middle of the 19th century a German astronomer, Maedler, selected the star Alcyone, the brightest of the Pleiades, as the universal hub, and certain persons dwelt upon the majestic thought that there, in that glimmering star, surrounded by its clustering sisters, human eyes could behold the site of the throne of the Almighty. But mathematics removed Alcyone's crown.

Not many years ago, when the immense luminosity and the inferred overpowering mass of the star Canopus—not visible from these latitudes—was announced, the suggestion arose that this star might be the long-sought center around which the universe revolved. But that idea never progressed in scientific circles, and soon was forgotten. The general impression seemed to be that if there was a rotation of the whole starry system the center of motion was empty, being represented by no massive aggregation.

But these wonderful far-away-glimmering star-clouds in Sagittarius and its neighboring constellations were always objects of speculation with all who spun theories about the structure of the cosmos, and it is not surprising that recent investigation indicates that they really do show us where the heart of our universe lies.

Three hundred million years is not so long a time as it once would have seemed. Now, the life span of suns and planets is extended theoretically over thousands of millions of years. If our earth has existed even one thousand million years it has had time to go three times around the great circuit.

But let us keep these things for a while in the waiting-room of the mind. Let the imagination interview them first to awaken our interest, but don't let them pass the inner door until the stamp of full scientific verification has been put upon them.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

BY ALINE MICHAELIS.

So many, many debts we owe,
The ancients, kind and wise,
For all the ages past bestow
On us their legacies.

So many debts we make each day,
Great debts for friendship's cheer,
For childhood's laughter, singing gay,
For love that makes life dear.

The debts for toil and debts for dreams
Are endless, link on link,
Yet still our debt most weights seems
To him who makes us think!

To him who opens vistas new
Our deepest toast we drink,
Through him life grows more fair, more true,
The man who makes us think!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Any one is free to wallow now.

WE HAVE LET DOWN BARS WHICH WERE NEVER LET DOWN IN THE DAYS OF THE SALOON

We have let them down because, at first, that letting down seemed an adventure.

A splendid gesture of defiance toward tyranny!

But now the adventure has become a habit—a demoralizing habit which is undermining the dignity and force of the United States Government and the decency of its citizens.

You can't FORCE people to be decent by laws.

THERE IS ONLY ONE THING IN THE WORLD THAT WILL KEEP A MAN OR A WOMAN FROM WALLOWING, AND THAT IS INDIVIDUAL PRIDE

We have forgotten that there is a difference between pigs and people.

WHAT THIS COUNTRY NEEDS IS A REVIVAL OF THAT OLD FASHIONED INSTITUTION OF GENTLE FOLK

Make people proud to be ladies and gentlemen.

SOCIAL OPINION IS INFINITELY MORE IMPORTANT IN MOLDING CONDUCT THAN CONGRESSIONAL LEGISLATION.

The mean look of a neighbor, a cut on the golf links a snub in a club, a bawling out in the office will do more to bring a weak man or woman to his or her senses than a million laws.

Don't give wallowers laws—

GIVE THEM THE DOG-EYE!

Stop trying to make people dry.

Try to make them ladies and gentlemen instead.

Expect them to be ladies and gentlemen

Soon you'll get somewhere.

8. Build the Nicaragua Canal as a commercial and defense measure; it was first advocated by the Hearst papers in 1895.

Day by Day Abroad

O.O. McINTYRE

PARIS, Jan. 30—Paris is a paradise for the prowler. One may turn off from a turbulent roaring boulevard and its flashy throngs into a narrow, winding and desolated street, to see perhaps only a lone figure perfunctorily sketching a wisp of cloud. This morning with my dog I set forth early.

Paris was going—fluttering is a better term—to work. The corrugated shutter fronts of the shops had been raised. Buses bulged with chattering loads. Bearded Frenchmen with handle-bar luncheons were pedaling madly. Teamsters screamed, their dogs—every teamster has his dog—yipped. And street criers blew their horns.

Nothing is quite so vibrant as an early Paris morning. It has a hum. Crossing over to the Left Bank I strolled, one never walks briskly here, along the Quai beyond the Chamber of Deputies and toward the Ile de la Cite—the original site of Paris. In one of the esplanades a traveling circus was beginning its day.

A "strong man" in tattered tights was braving the chill to lift weights for a sleepy-eyed handful. A wheezy carrousal at this hour had two customers and a few drivers had deserted two wheeled carts to test their luck at a huge spinning gambling wheel. It was all as depressing as the chilly mist.

Further along were the famous Halles des Vin with their enormous casks of wine and pungent, sour odors. Ponderous low-slung trunks, drawn by teams of six and eight horses, were being loaded for a part of the day's whoopee water consumption. On the Seine, the poor were doing their washing in municipal laundry boats.

Turning into a little side street that proved a blind alley, I dropped into a chair at a sidewalk table. A bar woman finally came out of the dingy depths scowling. And learning my desire was cafe au lait, tripled the scowl. I imagine the same effect could be had ordering a hot dog at the Ritz.

Everywhere women wielded needles, some knitting as they strolled. Men only idled. Women symbolize the industry of France in poorer sections. The pronounade finally took me past an infamous cafe where waitresses wait on trade au naturel. I hurried by with eyes cast demurely down, blushing like everything.

ONE of the omnipresent figures in the region of the Place Vendome is the American, E. Berry Wall. You always see him. He wears the same type of huge puff tie and flaring pointed choke collar that distinguished him in the days when, as New York's fashion plate, his 200 suits of clothes were always good for a Sunday feature story. Every afternoon he may be found at Rumpelmayer's at teatime with his chow. He is one of the last of New York's vanishing aristocrats of the Nineties, and he and his wife are not only active in American charities but extremely popular with the self-exiled.

COUNT Boni de Castellane, the discarded husband of Anna Gould, is also to be found where Americans gather, dancing his exquisite attendance upon rich old ladies of leisure. A French bulldog, too, is his constant companion.

COUNT Boni reminds me that never in Paris have I seen the stage and comic paper type of French count—the sort with high, peaked silk hat, waxed mustache and elite, imperial, high-heeled shoes and such. Boni, for instance might be an ordinary type of merchant hereabouts, or even a third basemen in the Southern League. Several other counts I have beheld do not look unlike the prosperous former types one sees on Paris fete days. But maybe the count business these days is not up to scratch.

AN outstanding trait of the French is what we would instantly class as trickiness, but is not so regarded by natives. It is not vicious, but annoying. Today in a rue St. Honore shop I asked for a certain brand of shaving soap. The proprietor almost prostrated himself trying to sell another brand. I feared an apoplectic seizure, but bravely held out for what I came for. Finally, with a deprecatory shrug and the hurt, wounded expression of a friendly doe, he wrapped up the package and handed it to me. At home I found the son of a gun had sold me the brand he touted.

I USED to fly into a rage over such shenanningans and storm back to the shops like a thundering cloud. "You never saw me really mad!" But I don't do that any more. I found their apologies would be no object that just to square your conscience you would permit them to sell you a lot more things you did not want. I came away once with an eyebrow comb and a night cap.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND.

WHEN a masterful man marries a managing woman the angels stuff cotton in their ears.

The tired business man in search of a little diverting love-making must find the flapper a wonderful labor-saving device.

Men are rebelling against the payment of alimony. But if a man will pay a wife good money for running his home, he can economize his dollars by mussing up his morning newspaper while his gin and mallow him or overshoes, why shouldn't he cheerfully pay her twice the amount for letting him ALONE?

Now that a girl doesn't have to stop to button her frocks, or "do up" her hair, she can be all dressed in time to sit around and wait two hours for the dilly-dallying modern man to show up.

Marriage has become a "major operation," in which a man submits only under an anaesthetic, and against which he struggles as long as he is conscious.

Most matrimonial mistakes are the result of that "nobody-loves-me" feeling. When you are suffering from love's hangover, almost anything in tweeds who tells you how wonderful you are, looks just like a cure.

No two women can be quite so blissfully absurd as those who have been divorced from the same man.

Many a woman never realizes how absurb she has been until she has read her husband's talk with a good lawyer.
